POINTS OF INTEREST

Gloucester, Cape Ann — First white man to visit its shores was Thorwald in 1004. Harbor called by Norsemen "Krossanes." Gosnold landed here in 1602 and found the place had been used as a base by Portuguese fishermen. In 1605 Champlain sailed by the Cape but did not land. The next year, September 1606, he entered the harbor which he named Le Beauport and made a map of it. Attacked by 200 Indians and sailed away the next day. In 1614 Capt. John Smith named it Cape Ann after Anne of Denmark, mother of King Charles I. First permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder. Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern Point. Dog Bar breakwater extends from a half mile long, completed in 1904 and extends from this point. On Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ramparts" occupies site of Fort Independence.

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the Cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenswood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from Fresh Water Cove or the so-called Old Salem road, Western avenue. Mason Walton's cabin, "Hermit of Bond's Hill," on this road. Well worth frequenting.

Beacon or Governor's Hill, near center of city, from Washington street. Small reservation at top from which a fine view may be obtained.

Dogtown Commons, site of deserted Revolutionary settlement. Reached from Gee avenue, Riverdale. Fine example of boulder deposits of glacial period. "Whale's Jaw," best known of these boulders, at edge of common. Rocking stone, etc., now taken over by the city as a water shed.

Wharves skirting the water front, interesting as affording "close-up" of fish curing, etc.

Babson House, opposite Ellery House, erected by Col. John Low about 1745. Old slave pens in attic.

Main street, first known as Fore, afterwards as Front street. Principal business avenue. Laid out 1642. Middle street, paralleling Main, contains many old colonial houses and the Judith Sargent house, the grounds of which, originally extending to Main street have been restored.

On Middle street are the First Parish (Unitarian) Church, oldest in Gloucester; Independent Christian (Universalist) first Universalist society in America, church edifice erected 1805; St. John's Episcopal Church, Trinity Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Sawyer Free Library and Reading Room, Middle street, adjoining Unitarian church. Interior fine specimen of colonial woodwork. Originally home of Thomas Sanders, merchant.

Old Town Hall Square, at junction of Middle and Washington streets. Beautiful American Legion Memorial building and monument on which was placed statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughn Hyatt.

Fort Point, at western side of inner harbor, down Commercial street from Main, fortified in 1743. Now Italian quarter and rendezvous of fishermen of that nationality.

Drives around the Cape: Up Washington street, through Riverdale, past Annisquam, Bay View, Lanesville into Pigeon Cove, Rockport and completing the circuit to Gloucester. Almost a continuous ocean view, which was completed when the Bass Rocks-Land's End stretch was completed.

Beaches: Little Good Harbor and Long Beaches, between Bass Rocks and Land's End, Rockport. Wingersheek Beach, West Gloucester, largest on Cape, two miles long, 600 feet deep at low tide; reached from Essex avenue, West Gloucester, down Concord street.

Quarries at Bay View and Pigeon Cove, among largest in country, near main highway.

Blynman canal, first cut in 1642 by Rev. Richard Blynman, at Western entrance of city.

Drives: "Little Heater," "Dark Hole" at West Gloucester.

Old Salem road, first highway from the town, blazed out in 1626, when part of the settlers went to Salem. Down Hesperus avenue (discontinued in 1892) to Salem. Name erroneously applied to Old Pest House road, leading through Ravenswood park from Western ave.

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND

Gloucester has lost an eminent citizen. To recount the many highlights of his career would be surplusage. Of the three imposing names of the nineteenth century those of Cecil Rhodes, Dr. Jameson and John Hays Hammond will outstand. Having completed his active career he chose Gloucester in which to spend his riper years. He loved the place and its people. It is fitting that the end came here quietly and peacefully as the western sun was sinking on the clear, farther horizon of Gloucester bay. There was no moaning of the bar when his bark put forth on the last voyage.

His was no lip service: The establishment of a Fisherman's Home for aged and penniless mariners; the gift of a Fisherman's Rest at Beachbrook instead of an unmarked mound in the Potter's field; the substantial donations to the local hospital and charitable institutions and the numerous unrecorded deeds of kindness while he lived all evinced the depth, sincerity and measure of the man. And in this worthy work, sitting at his elbow was that devoted helpmate who ranks with the notable women of her time. Their like may not pass our way again.

WHITHER?

SINCE THE LAST issue of the Shore things have happened, epochal in their import. The groggy old world emerging from the Great War was just coming back on an even keel, having been knocked down until the crosstrees were buried in water, when another hurricane struck her squarely amidships and again thrust her on her beam ends and now the good ship wallows and strains to right herself and square away on a course of sanity. Excuse mixed metaphors—if you detect any.

First that world stabilizer, King George died. Sig Mussolini had gone off on the African rampage. "Sick at heart the King, dreading another World War drench of the kingdoms best blood sank beneath the terrific strain and was gathered to his fathers. Then came Edward the Eighth and the opening days of his reign have not been auspicious. Anthony Eden bravely met the Roman challenge with England's fleet. But Trafalgar has not been repeated. Sold out by the duplicity of Laval and American sanctions—both political sides taking no chances with the Italian vote in this critical Presidential year in New York—England has suffered the most humiliating discomfiture in its history. But there's a saying that the English always lose every round but the last when she scores a knockout. Time will tell.

Then Herr Hitler, seizing opportunity by the forelock repeats the old Teutonic trick of making scraps of paper of treaties and boldly leaping the barrier takes possession of the Nomans' land across the Rhine and calmly asks what are you going to do about it?

Japan with its modern Genghis Khans is moving westward with terrific speed halted only by Russia. China is virtually gobbled up. Looking eastward the Nipponese, according to newspaper reports, are reported to have made overtures to a South American power for a cession of the Galapagos islands in exchange for a nagreement to come to the defense of that power should an aggressor make such a course necessary. Galapagos a short distance from Panama. What power does Japan have in mind? For the Japanese hold that if America can decree and maintain a Munroe doctrine for the western hemisphere what logical objection to her assuming the same suzerainty over Asia and Australasia? And why, indeed, when you come to analyze it? The only doubt about it is whether Japan can back up her pretensions with sufficient force to comply respect and acquiescence. More than ever this is the age of the Right of Might, tooth and claw.

Nor is this virus of economic unrest confined to these major powers. Even Spain and Portugal which ten years ago were thought firmly anchored to the ancient teachings, civic, economic and clerical, have completely revolutionized the old order of things. Down in Mexico the same state of affairs. Verily the world is upside down.

The death of Kipling marks the passing of the world's greatest poet and literary light of the century from 1850 on. He too—the Empire's greatest exponent—went saddened by his death hastened by the debacle of his latest days. He sleeps beside the men who have made England great—in war, literature and science. It is fitting that justice should come to him, although posthumously.

While there is no mistaking the ominous important of the big black clouds rolling steadily eastward from the Pacific front, the United States has not been embroiled. Fortunately the elder statesmen of all political parties are as one on the most important essential that America shall not become involved in any way in these foreign entanglements. Even our disarmament friends now perceive clearly that our salvation depends upon adequate naval and land defenses, mainly the former.

In this country floods and droughts of a magnitude not witnessed in a century have punished the Earth and out millions of property. Huey who strode the national terrain, litical Colussus, has been wiped out the too common and ominous rou assassination—for this country. Bonus legions, repulsed often but tried every stronghold of their opposed defeated have, in a grand assault and emerged victorious in attaining their objective. They are yet reckoned with. Going into war were promised everything. Now are going to cash in. No welching be tolerated.

The time has come for sober thinking and sane action in the halls of legislation. Gen. Pershing voiced a warning at the graduation at West Point that was only by adequate protective measures could this country be immune against aggression. Let no one see such warning. Smug in our notion of 3000 miles of water on every front but the north protects us from invasion we have laughed such prophesies off—especially the inlanders.

Time and space and deep seas have been annihilated by modern invention. Within a year the giant Z will make the Atlantic crossing in hours. One of these air frigates carrying tons of destructive matter gasses, screened by an artificial cloud can wipe out our largest cities in a night—Chicago as easily as New York. What might a fleet of a hundred of these do in one night? Then there is the perfected submarine. It ravaged our England coastline in the World War. Most within sight of Cape Ann. I do so again and more effectually. The grim and sobering thought is thus a welcome home that, will he, nil he, time is not so far away when the United States must fight defensively, if not offensively, for its very existence. The Pacific as well as the Atlantic might as well face this fact and prepare for it.

"THE MORE ABUNDANT LIFE"

For Grandpa

Buck up, Grandpa, start to smile
You'll soon be living in great style
When the Townsend Plan gets working,
You'll be every labor shirking.
While we younger folks are busy,
You can invest in a "tin-Lizzie."
Off to Revere you can go,
There take part in every show.
Play the horses and the dogs,

Dress up in the best of togs —
You'll be welcome in every direction,
For you MUST spend your monthly pension —
You'll not have to worry or fret.
Your Uncle Sam will see to that —
Who wouldn't be a carefree man —
Hurrah for Doc Townsend and his Plan!
Who wouldn't welcome sixty and over
Then, Grandpa, you'll live in clover!

BEARSKIN NECK (ROCKPORT) ART GALLERY

Arthur C. Smith of Rockport and St. Petersburg, Fla., has opened his gallery for another season.

Those who are "art hungry" may sup on good wholesome art without a cover charge and study the technique of the paintings now on display.

Many distinguished artists who are either resident or summering at this picturesque town are represented by some of their best work.

Mr. Smith has made the rounds of the artists' studios and picked out little gems to be displayed on the gallery walls. Many of the small paintings would brighten up a dark space in any home, and the most fastidious collectors would deem it an honor to own most any of the paintings.

It would seem that the depression has brought the artists down from painting mammoth canvases to the small size paintings which no doubt are nearer to what the public can pay for. Many of these are direct studies from nature and completed in one sitting, with all the freshness of the early morning's dew in them.

Aldro T. Hibbard, N.A., tops the list of exhibitors. His small snow pictures of scenes in Vermont, express so nicely the feeling of winter when all is snowy white. Hibbard never disappoints his public with his masterful paintings.

We also like Galen J. Perrett's work, his marines are so colorful; they are rendered with precision, the swirl of the sea as it crashes over the rocks has a beautiful foamy quality which many of the painters of the sea do not seem to register. Stanley W. Woodward, a new arrival in the Rockport Art Colony, is classed with the best painters of the sea. His two marines are sparkling. Local sea painters are Parker Perkins and Gilbert Margeson, who are also worshippers of the angry sea. They work the best while the waves dash high against the rocky shore.

Our versatile Anthony Thieme can paint a pictorial subject which pleases the public taste, and, what would an exhibition be along the North Shore without the famous Motif No. 1?

Marguerite Pearson has a lovely painting entitled "Playing the Melodeon," a nice composition and is painted charmingly.

Others who have good work on display are Emile Gruppe, Frank Rines, Grace Russell, M. Bennett-Brown, Raymond Carter, Joseph Higgins, Otis P. Cook, Jr., Mary W. Wagner, A. F. Jacobson, Yarnall Abbott, and J. Eliot Enneking.

The public is cordially invited to attend, and is open daily to September 15.

— NEMO.

John Loneragan of New York City has been occupying one of the Savage studios during June.

Yarnall Abbott of Philadelphia has arrived at his Main st. studio for a stay late into the season.

The Misses Cora and Marie Guilion of Philadelphia are again domiciled at the studio in Dock sq. which they have occupied for several seasons.

Frederick Lebrun, an artist with Mrs. Lebrun, have taken one of the Cleaves studios on Pigeon Hill for a stay into September.

J. Eliot Enneking of Brookline and Rockport, is holding an exhibition of his oil paintings at the Fireside Studio, 7 Dock sq., Rockport, from July 6 to September 15, daily from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. except Sundays. The public is cordially invited to attend the exhibition. There are many local scenes of Gloucester and Rockport to be shown, also Mystic, Connecticut and Kearsarge, New Hampshire.

Among the paintings to be on display are as follows: "Moat Mountain," "The Spirit of Spring," "Motif No. 1," "Gloucester Inner Harbor," and many other paintings of interest. Mr. Enneking is also represented by his work at Rockport Art Association, North Shore Arts Association, Gloucester Society of Artists, Bearskin Neck Gallery, Barn Door and the Art Mart in Rockport.

LITTLE VERSES

We are gentlemen.
That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes,
Envy the great, nor do the low despise.

Abundance is a blessing to the wise;
The use of riches in discretion lies;
Learn this, ye men of wealth—a heavy purse
In a fool's pocket is a heavy curse.

Not in the clamor of the crowded street—
Not in the shouts and plaudits of the throng,
But in ourselves are triumph and defeat.

The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But they while their companions slept
Were toiling upward in the night.

Our lives are albums written through
With good or ill, with false or true;
And as the blessed angels turn
The pages of our years,
God grant they read the good, with smiles,
And blot the ill with tears.

GOOD OLD TOWN OF ROCKPORT

Extends Welcome Hand To Summer Residents --- Taxes Lowered $3.
For Current Year --- Fame As Summer and Permanent Home Grows

ROCKPORT — BY J. ELIOT ENNEKING

ROCKPORT SEEMS TO BE on the down grade — in the right way. The assessors announce that they have reduced the rate of taxation from $36 to $33 for the current season. This is the lowest since 1933 when the rate was $30.

The descent has not been easy, but the manner in which it has been accomplished may furnish an example to all communities, great and small.

Originally all Cape Ann was the town of Gloucester, but in 1840 the northeastern section thought it best to get set off by itself, and the "harbor," as Gloucester proper was known at the time, offered no protest. So in four years more the town may, in mid-Summer, observe its centennial as a corporate entity if it so desires and it probably does.

The principal occupation has in the long run been fishing. Lacking an enclosed harbor the main part of the populace either berthed their boats at Annisquam or sometimes at Little Good Harbor as circumstances placed them.

However, its citizens energetically looked ahead to establishing manufacturing. Accordingly a large cotton duck mill—to furnish sails for the Gloucester fleet—was built, and a colony of skilled weavers brought over from England. This burned flat Dec. 9, 1883, and was never rebuilt. Smaller industries, such as an organ factory, isinglass, from fish sounds, and others came into existence, but the great boost ahead came after the Civil War when the demand for building material opened up the quarries, some 600 men being employed in the most prosperous times. But strange to say in the most prosperous era of the building trade, the 1920-30 decade, these quarries as a working concern practically went out of existence. Since then no major occupation has come in to take its place.

Augmented by the abnormal wel costs, the citizens faced one of the difficult problems of any in the s. They rallied and took stock. "V have we as an asset?" The obser made answer. "One of the most b tiful stretches of seashore for Sum and permanent homes in the state, possibilities of which are scar scratched."

Welcomed Summer People

For several years past, retired pe those with incomes, had discovere Rockport just the ideal condition living they desired for the Autum life.

Here was the answer, said the to people: "Let's join hands with t people, make them welcome as ne bors, and induce them to bring in friends." And they went ahead a that line.

The town for some years had ar

ory committee which passed upon articles involving expenditure of money proposed in the annual warrant which were pared down and its recommendations always followed in the end.

This season the committee was virtually dominated by a Summer comer who had just become a permanent resident. The motto was to pare down and go down to a pay-as-you-go system without stretching economy into parsimony. Its recommendations were adopted without ado with the resultant decrease in taxes. For example the police wanted a cruising car with radio equipment. Granted it was a good thing but it must wait for a later date. It went so down the line to a decrease of per thousand.

In the past five years the Summer resident interest in Rockport has grown rapidly. More and more the little pitched roof colonial bungalows known as Cape Cod houses but which are numerous and perhaps indigenous to Cape Ann have been purchased by those who, singing a business career, seek a town where conditions are quiet and to their liking. At present the ratio of Summer resident real estate valuation is as three to one for the permanents, about the same as in Gloucester.

So, pointed in the direction of making their shore acres more desirable from every standpoint to the outsider who comes either for a Summer or permanent home, the citizens are bending every effort to develop the bounteous excess of natural beauty which they have as an asset to its highest possibility, and it has taken occasion in this matter of the constituency of its advisory board, to show that this feeling is no empty gesture and they are not out to "soak the rich" supposedly person who comes down for a Summer or permanent home.

In 1884 the people realizing that if a big seawall could be built their harbor would become one of the finest in the world put the project over. This work undertaken and about a third completed was abandoned some 25 years ago by advice of the army engineers and a hard blow struck at the interests of the town.

Yankee Town

In consequence Rockport remains a typically "Yankee" town as regards population. The directory and town officials contain the names in increasing numbers of the descendants of early settlers. The opening of the stone quarries brought in more recent years large numbers of Swedish and later of the Finnish peoples—all literate to a high degree in their own languages and English also. They are not much given to office seeking but blend quietly into the productive activities of the town.

Recently an effort was made to interest the national Government into completing the unfinished breakwater. The argument advanced—and with some plausibility—was that if so many millions were to be spent on Quoddy, Sandy Bay breakwater was equally deserving if not more so. Some $5,000,000 would have completed the breakwater and given employment for several years to every unemployed stone worker on the cape.

The above mentioned summer residents who officiated with such marked success was Mr. T. H. C. Gibb.

ST. JOHN'S FAIR Beverly Farms

Even though the exact nature of the St. John's Church fair on Thursday, July 30, is to be a deep, dark secret right up until the last minute, the heads of the various tables and other features have just been revealed. The rummage table, which always has a crowd around it, is under the supervision of Mrs. W. Galbraith Mitchell of Beverly Farms. This table has such a fascination for most people that it was found necessary to add a great many assistants. All the wonderful vegetables from North Shore gardens will be sold by a group of ladies with Mrs. Charles K. Cummings in charge. It seems very appropriate that Mrs. Russell Burrage should head the flower table. The "useful and fancy" articles table is another popular one and the Women's Auxiliary, with Mrs. Bradford H. Burnham at the head, has charge of this. Mrs. Thomas Barbour will be at the cake and candy table, and Miss Eleanor Coolidge, with a group of friends, is to be debutante cigarette-and-balloon salesgirl.

On that day every one might just as well plan to stay all day and lunch in the cafeteria which will be run by Mrs. Henry Lee; while still on the food subject lighter refreshments are to be served by the girls' club of the church. One always finds a most unique and intriguing grab bag at this fair, and this year Miss Frances Fabryan is in charge of it. Games for all the shore children and some that will even fascinate their elders, are to be sold by Mrs. Bayard Warren.

Books and more books will go like lightning with Mrs. Lyon Weyburn at the head of this department. The entertainment and "features" all the ideas for various costumes and out of the ordinary things, will be directed by Mrs. Nathaniel S. Simpkins. Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr., has quite a job on her hands with the placing of posters and notices in all the stores in the vicinity, while at the head of the publicity department is Miss Elise Sortwell.

Gardens

Another reminder is that there are just a few more days to wait until the twenty of the North Shore's most beautiful gardens are to be opened to the public by the ladies of the North Shore Garden Club, with Mrs. W. Endicott Dexter as chairman. This is really a rare opportunity that no lover of gardens and places can afford to miss.

MAGNOLIA AND THE COUNTYSIDE

summer home, the former Bigelow house off Hesperus avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. McMillan whose winter residence is The Plaza, New York, were June arrivals at "Stonehurst," Shore road.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Moses and family are again the occupants of "Rockwood" house in Hesperus ave.

Mr. and Mrs. F. K. M. Rehn, Jr., of New York, whose family have been represented here for some forty years and have achieved note in the art world, have come to "Rehnwood" in Oakes avenue for the season.

HOW many can tell the derivation of "Oakes" avenue. A prominent national name of the late 70's?

Mrs. Frederick C. Schaeffer of Haverford, Penn., who has been a summer resident here many years, died at her home during the winter. Her cottage, "The Four Winds," will be occupied this season by Dr. Farlow of Boston.

Another Magnolia mid-season resident of many years who passed on during the winter was C. W. MacD. Smith of Germantown, Pa., and Park avenue, New York. His summer home was in Lexington avenue.

Charles Wadsworth of Pelham Manor, N. Y., has purchased the Margaret Corlies "Att-Lea House" in Fuller street. He is the son of the late Rev. Dr. Charles Wadsworth who made his summer home in Magnolia for many years.

Mrs. John Sharman Zinnser and family of Summit, N. J., are occupying the "Wadsworth Cottage," Oakes field. She is the daughter of the late Dr. Wadsworth.

Miss Mary Winslow of 525 Beacon street, Boston, who had the Thornberg cottage "Sunnyside" last summer, will be in Europe this season.

Miss Elizabeth M. Scammon of Beacon street, Boston, has come to her summer house, corner Fuller street and Hesperus avenue.

Mrs. Thompson S. Sampson and family of Farmington, Conn., is occupying her home in Summer street.

Penhallow cottage, Magnolia avenue, continues to be the summer home of Mrs. Charles S. Penhallow of Beverly.

Mrs. Stanley McCormick of 407 Commonwealth ave., Boston, opened "Rockledge," Shore road, for the season early in June.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Hoyle of Wellesley Hills have come to "The Studio" for another season.

Mrs. John Fremont Hill of 65 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, and family are occupying "Twin Acres" cottage, Hesperus avenue, their summer home for some years past.

Mrs. Pierpont Dutcher of Milwaukee, a summer resident of many years, here died during the winter. Her maiden name was Bull. Charles H. Bull, a Chicago banker of national note a generation ago, was among the early cottage builders in Magnolia.

Mr. and Mrs. David B. Armstrong of Somerville have returned for the season to their Raymond street cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick McG. Bundy and children of 42 Pinckney street, Boston, are established for the season in their Hesperus avenue summer home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clement of Melrose have come to their cottage in Raymond street.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover J. Cronin and family of West Newton have returned to their Lexington avenue house for the summer.

Dr. Mary D. Dakin of Beacon street, Boston, has opened "Afterglow" cottage in Fuller street and will remain during the season.

Mrs. Mary E. Nash of Cambridge came down in June and opened her cottage in Chester square for the season.

THE ROCKPORT SECTOR

ROCKPORT IS LOOKING up in more respects than one—especially as a summer resident locality. The government has recently recognized that fact by decreeing the erection of a $75,000 postoffice—to be erected, some say, on the site of the present quarters, but there is nothing definite in regard to that particular item. Yachting and artists is the theme song of this favorite section.

Dr. Cora Holden and Miss Cove Holden of Cleveland have arrived for the summer at the Iron Balcony, Broadway.

Miss Sophie Parker of Upper Iowa University, Fayette, Ia., is spending the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Tarr of Broadway.

Dr. and Mrs. Eugene McGillion and

It is understood that Miss Ida G. Beal of Boston will not occupy "Woodside" in Norman avenue this season.

Mrs. Frederick H. Button, who makes her winter home at the St. Regis, New York, has come to her cottage in Flume avenue for another season.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Farnum of Chicago, who have one of the finest residences in this locality, will not occupy the place this season but will spend the season at one of the mountain resorts in upper New York.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Haward of Wellesley Hills have taken Apple-tree cottage in Fuller street for another season.

Percy V. Hill and family of Augusta, Me., have returned to their family of Yonkers, N. Y., have arrived at their summer home on High street for the summer.

THE Fourth was celebrated with a dancing party at the Rockport Art Gallery. The hall was decorated in the symbolic red, white, and blue streamers and huge firecrackers.

The highlight of the evening was a firecracker race by six young couples.

The winning pair were Mrs. Zion of Boston and Parker Sorlien of Pittsburgh.

MILADY GOES SHOPPING

Gloucester, Mass.

Dear Eloise:

Since I last saw you, I have accepted a position as a private secretary to a poker, Mr. Marsh. He is a very conservative sort of man, and rather easy work for. I met Mrs. Marsh the other day, and she is the exact opposite. She told me her whole family history; so that of her daughter, Joan, had just been married and was on her honeymoon. She asked me if I liked swimming, boating, tennis, dancing and other sports, and when I said that I did, she thought I would make a good companion for her when she went to Gloucester for the summer—so here I am—a private secretary and a companion.

Mr. Marsh has been away on a business trip, and I have been almost crazy trying to keep up with Mrs. Marsh. We just don our bathing suits and she decides that she wants to go horseback riding; then she changes her mind and suggests boating—one never knows what she is going to do next.

When Mr. Marsh came back, he told us he had bought a house for his daughter, Joan (the one who had just been married), and he thought it would be a good idea if we furnished it for her as a surprise. We had several weeks in which to do this as Joan and her husband had planned quite an extensive trip.

However, we thought we had better start right away as Mr. Marsh always says "Haste makes waste."

Mr. Marsh had already been to the Cooperative Bank to borrow money to buy the house. (He always transacts business in this way.) He said he selected this bank because of its efficiency, and the facility of the payment plan.

There were so many things to be done that we were in a turmoil as to where to begin.

Then Mr. Marsh mentioned Hornblower and Weeks and said he must send a telegram to them about some investments he was to investigate. This meant nothing to me so I told him I would walk around down town and wait for him.

I sauntered along Main street not missing a thing in any window, as you know how I adore window-shopping. Just then a bright-colored awning attracted my attention—a new store in Gloucester—The Mimi Shop. Being a woman, and you know what that means, I just had to go in and look around. They carry all the latest styles at the most reasonable prices—culottes, silk and cotton dresses, and even formal evening gowns. For a minute, I forgot the poor bride and started to try on innumerable dresses for myself. I finally found one that I just had to have, and of course I bought a pair of culottes—the most striking shade of blue—everybody's wearing culottes, you know. They come in all different shades.

When I came out of the Mimi Shop, I met Mr. Marsh, who had just been in the gas and electric companies to inquire about having gas and electricity connected in the house. He said he had seen an Everhot Automatic Roaster in there that he was sure his daughter would like, and he wanted me to go in to look at it. Oh, Eloise, it was grand. It is designed for easy cooking at a saving. In one operation, you can cook a complete meal, or any of your favorite dishes—meats, vegetables, biscuits, cakes, pies, pancakes, fried chicken, French toast—with complete assurance of satisfactory results.

Just place the food in the roaster, and you need pay no more attention to it. Thermostatic control automatically regulates temperature; less watching is necessary. Meats baste themselves in their own juices. Full flavors and health-building mineral and juices are retained. I knew this was just the thing for Joan as I heard rumors that she is like her mother—she never could cook!

Oh, yes, I almost forgot to tell you about Mrs. Marsh. She is really a dear, but I am afraid she is so busy doing a lot of things that she never gets to do one thing well.

The other day she fell out of a speed boat going at top-speed and nearly broke her neck, but she thought it "Oh so thrilling!" because a handsome life-guard saved her.

Now to get back to my shopping list; a refrigerator of some sort was inevitable, so we went in to the Cape Pond Ice Co. to browse around and there found just what we wanted, the Coolerator. These are very convenient as they need be re-iced only once every four to seven days, under ordinary conditions, and while re-icing it is not necessary to remove the old pieces—no defrosting—no mess on the floor.

After hearing the salesman tell us about all the delicious foods that could be cooled in this Coolerator, my stomach began to feel a bit empty. I was tempted to suggest luncheon to Mr. Marsh, but he evidently had the same idea. We had heard a great deal about the Stage Coach Inn so we decided to try it. We found it located in Gloucester on the highway between Gloucester and Essex. This old Inn, built about 1649, is one of the earliest in New England. Here, today, as in days of yore, may be found the heritage of State Coach days—Food—Rest—Good Cheer—and Hospitality, of which the Inn is so suggestive.

After we left the Stage Coach Inn, feeling sufficiently replenished, Mr. Marsh noted that his finances were becoming depleted, so we went to the Cape Ann National Bank to withdraw some money.

Joan had bought some unpainted kitchen furniture, and Mr. Marsh thought it would be a good idea if it were all painted when she returned, so we went to L. E. Andrews to buy the paint. There was such an assortment of paints we were at a standstill. But, knowing, Joan liked bright colors, I suggested Ivory and red. Of course, Mr. Marsh not an expert on house furnishings, left the decision to me, so ivory and red it was.

That was really all I meant to do in L. E. Andrews, as there was so much else to be done; but as I was walking out, I spied a breakfast set that would go perfectly with the furniture, and so inexpensively priced that I suggested to was up to me, so I took it. Mr. Marsh Mr. Marsh that we buy it. He said it is such a dear!

As we were coming out of L. E. Andrews, as luck would have it, I put my hand in my pocket and found the list of articles that Maybelle, the cook, had told me to get in the First National Store. No wonder Maybelle sent me to the First National Store. They have almost everything and what they sell is of the best quality. But there was one thing that was lacking in our purchases and we would not be without them—Groton's Ready-to-Fry Codfish Cakes. With my next letter, I will send you a carton of them to try—they're delicious.

I glanced at my watch and it was two forty-five—just time to make a deposit of part of my salary at the Gloucester National Bank. If I had kept all my money with me, I certainly would have spent it on the wonderful bargains and assortments in the Gloucester stores!

We dashed home as I thought there might be some mail I would have time to answer before dinner. The first part of the mail was of not much importance to me, but I'll say the last letter was. It informed me that Mr. Marsh had a son at college who would be home in two or three days. That surely is something to look forward to.

Mrs. Marsh has the curlers caught in her hair and is screaming madly—I suppose I must go and set the captive free.

So long,

C. ANNE SHORE.

EAST GLOUCESTER

—E—summer and permanent residents alike—shall miss the cheery and friendly greeting of Piatt Andrew as he came through the town in the morning. Coming here as a boy he merged into the life of this New England seaport. Going forth again—for human rights—and into the halls of Congress, cut off in his life at the peak of his capacity at the time when men of such equipment sorely needed at the helm of the state. "Did ye ken John Peel?" Mrs. Marcia Taylor and mother of Mrs. on, annual summer residents, have arrived at their cottage on East Main street.

Robert Voorhees of Fort Myers, Florida, has arrived for the season.

Hildur C. Ahl of Boston has come to her cottage, Mt. Pleasant avenue, for the season.

Herbert Turner, writer, and niece, Mildred Copperman, the artist, who have been spending the past three years in Europe, are at present in Spain. Mr. Turner and Miss Copperman have spent several seasons in East Gloucester.

Dr. E. A. Kalbfleisch of Boston has arrived for the season and has an apartment at Mrs. William Osler's on Mt. Pleasant avenue.

Dr. Clifton W. Harrington and family of Brookline, have arrived at "Echo Lodge," Ledge road.

The Cape Ann Garden Club held its first meeting of the summer June 25, at the home of Mrs. A. A. Hoehling, Grape Vine road. Donald Wyman of the Arnold Arboretum spoke on "Flowering Trees and Shrubs."

This club with a membership of one hundred and a substantial waiting list has a well earned reputation on the North Shore and among the federated garden clubs of the State.

Mrs. Bratenahl has resigned as president, as she will not be in Gloucester this year, and Miss Eleanor H. Jones of Magnolia chosen in her place.

Other officers are Mrs. James L. Stuart, recording secretary, Mrs. Harry H. Walker, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Geo. C. Andrews, treasurer, and Mrs. Francis A. Brewer, head of program. The exhibition committee included Mrs. Norton, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Max L. Talbot, and Mrs. Samuel H. Pillsbury.

Members of the executive committee (ex officio) are Mrs. Leslie Buswell, Mrs. M. Anderson Case, Miss Louise Condit, Mrs. Guy Cunningham,

EASTERN POINT

All roads from the North shore summer colony led to the baronial seashore home, "Blighty," of Col. and Mrs. John Wing Prentiss on Independence day. For that is a red letter date in the colonel's calendar and he observes that epochal anniversary in the ancient manner with the "ample hospitality of the forefathers as all true born Americans should. Several hundred were in attendance all wishing Col. and Mrs. Prentiss many happy returns of the day—and they meant it. They opened their home early in June after their return from a California vacation of several weeks. As usual they will remain over the Christmas holidays.

Mrs. Margaret Brady Farrell has arrived at her estate "Felsenmeer" at Grape Vine Cove.

Mr. and Mrs. Romano will occupy the Pew cottage on Farrington avenue, Eastern Point, this season.

Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose of Washington, has arrived at "Sea Rocks" at Eastern Point, for the season.

YACHTING

The yachting season for Cape Ann's four clubs—the Annisquam, Eastern Point, Sandy Bay and Conomo—promises to be fully up to the activities of the past five years. Eastern Point, besides its regular schedule on the water has branched out into some house and land activities which promise to stimulate interest in this thriving organization.

Annisquam the oldest organization on the Cape will as usual sail its Saturday and Sunday races and "in between" with the house committee arranging the usual Saturday night assemblies and entertainments. Its schedule begins July 4 and ends Labor Day.

Sandy Bay, third in point of seniority, retains the atmosphere of the old Cape Ann and Gloucester clubs which in their beginnings were largely made up of permanent residents.

At Rockport the membership composition is about fifty-fifty between permanent and summer contingent. As a result at the centrally located clubhouse the club is kept going as an all-year social institution where the members foregather at all times thereby keeping alive the interest and in this way has somewhat an advantage over the others which fold up after the season to reopen in the midseason.

The officers of Sandy Bay comprise George A. Lowe, commodore; Homer Clark, vice-commodore; Joseph T. Higgins, secretary and treasurer; Joseph F. Lockett, chairman of the house committee and Benton A. Story, chairman racing committee. The fixture is divided into two sections. The first extends from June 21, races to be held Saturday and Sunday afternoons through July 26. The second series will begin August 1 and end September 6.

Sandy Bay day will be held August 21 and will include an open regatta in which Conomo and New-

A part of this schedule back happy memories of the yesteryear when these Isle Shoals races were on the car the old clubs. The writer pated in a number, generally Horatio Babson in his crack 30 Mignon, one of the fastest bo the coast. And speaking of buryport, its thriving club of days was always on hand w good representation on the "days" on Cape Ann, with the gras and Jacoby's and other the forefront yachtsmen of the old city by the Merrimac at helm of their boats. Yachting recent years, caused by chan conditions appears to have much of this democracy and m borliness of the olden time w happily Sandy Bay seems to retained.

GLOUCESTER, June 27—Eastern Point Yacht Club inaugur its 1936 racing program today a fleet of 16 in the Triangle Cape Cod Knockabout classes.

After an hour's postponer there was little air stirring v the boats were sent away, the angles to the western mark off Magnolia and return, and the little lows over a harbor course.

Injun got the jump, picked a favoring breeze off the eas shore and opened up on a thras windward as the air fresh from the southwest, finishing minutes ahead of Scalene.

Clipper overtook Tourareg on winward leg, to take the Cape Knockabout honors. The mary:

The Triangles and Stars were out of luck early in the game. Ma-rounded in the doldrums just abreast of Norman's Woe, they were forced eventually to give up and return.

The Knockabouts on the inside course were better favored and managed to catch an air that took them to the finish line just within

STAR OF INDIA WINS

GLOUCESTER, July 5—Three asses started this afternoon at eastern Point over a triangular course in a moderate but fluky northeast breeze.

The real contest of the day was the Star Class which was nipped tuck between Mrs. Ogilby in the Star of India and Jack Raymond at the tiller of Saturn. At a close a sharp luffing match between the two into Quarry Cove led to save the one needed second for the Raymond boat. The summary:

POWER BOATS — MUFFLERS

(a) Power driven boats shall not exceed a speed of ten (10) miles per hour in the inner harbor, and for the purposes of determining what is the inner harbor, same shall comprise all the waters of Gloucester harbor lying northeasterly of an imaginary line extending from the spindle standing southwesterly of the Tarr & Wonsen copper paint factory directly across to the Fort Wharf, or by whatever name said wharf may be called.

(b) Boats with internal combustion engines shall be provided and equipped with a muffler or underwater exhaust of a type or types approved by and used in conformity with the rules and regulations authorized by the Commissioner of Public Safety, so that the noise of the same shall not cause unreasonable annoyance to persons in the vicinity of said boats.

LOBSTER POTS PROHIBITED

(c) Lobster or fish pots and similar contrivances attached to the surface with a rope and buoy floating on the surface, shall not be set, established, or maintained in the channel of Annisquam River, nor in the channels of the principal arms thereof, nor in the regularly used fairways in Gloucester harbor and waters adjacent thereto, nor within the courses laid out for races maintained by the Eastern Point Yacht Club and the Annisquam Yacht Club, nor anywhere else so as to unreasonably restrict the free use and navigation of said waters, unless a permit in writing is issued by the State Department of Public Works.

Any violation of this section shall be punished by a fine of Twenty Dollars ($20) for each offence.

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

In the year nineteen hundred and thirty-two,

AN ORDINANCE

providing for certain ISOLATED "STOP" signs.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

SECTION 1—Every driver of a vehicle, bus or other conveyance, approaching an intersecting way at which there exists facing him, an official sign, authorized by this Municipal Council, said sign having apart from this regulation, the written approval of the Department of Public Works of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and bearing the word "STOP" shall before entering and proceeding through the intersection, bring such vehicle, bus or other conveyance to a complete STOP at such line as may be clearly marked, or, if there is no line so marked, at a place between the said sign and the line of the street intersection.

In the case of a line of two or more vehicles approaching such "STOP" sign, the drivers of the second and third vehicles in any group shall not be required to stop more than once at said designated line or place or in the immediate vicinity.

This ordinance shall not apply when the traffic is otherwise directed by a police officer or by any other lawful traffic regulating sign, signal or device.

SECTION 2—In accordance with the foregoing, the Municipal Council hereby authorize the erection and maintenance of an official "STOP" sign or "stop" signs so as to face:

1—North and southbound drivers

YACHTING OF THE WEEK

NEWS FROM ALL SECTIONS OF THE SUMMER COLONY OF GREATER CAPE ANN

POINTS OF INTEREST

Gloucester, Cape Ann — First white man to visit its shores was Thorwald in 1004. Harbor called by Norsemen "Krossanes." Gosnold landed here in 1602 and found the place had been used as a base by Portuguese fishermen. In 1605 Champlain sailed by the Cape but did not land. The next year, September 1606, he entered the harbor which he named Le Beauport and made a map of it. Attacked by 200 Indians and sailed away the next day. In 1614 Capt. John Smith named it Cape Ann after Anne of Denmark, mother of King Charles I. First permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder. Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern Point. Dog Bar breakwater extends from a half mile long, completed in 1904 and extends from this point. On Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ram-

parts" occupies site of Fort Independence.

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the Cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenswood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from Fresh Water Cove or the so-called Old Salem road, Western avenue. Mason Walton's cabin, "Hermit of Bond's Hill," on this road. Well worth frequenting.

Beacon or Governor's Hill, near center of city, from Washington street. Small reservation at top from which a fine view may be obtained.

Dogtown Commons, site of deserted Revolutionary settlement. Reached from Gee avenue, Riverdale. Fine example of boulder deposits of glacial period. "Whale's Jaw," best known of these boulders, at edge of common. Rocking stone, etc., now taken over by the city as a water shed.

Wharves skirting the water front, interesting as affording "close-up" of fish curing, etc.

Babson House, opposite Ellery House, erected by Col. John Low about 1745. Old slave pens in attic.

Main street, first known as Fore, afterwards as Front street. Principal business avenue. Laid out 1642. Middle street, paralleling Main, contains many old colonial houses and the Judith Sargent house, the grounds of which, originally extending to Main street have been restored.

On Middle street are the First Parish (Unitarian) Church, oldest in Gloucester; Independent Christian (Universalist) first Universalist society in America, church edifice erected 1805; St. John's Episcopal Church, Trinity Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Sawyer Free Library and Reading Room, Middle street, adjoining Unitarian church. Interior fine specimen of colonial woodwork. Originally home of Thomas Sanders, merchant.

Old Town Hall Square, at junction of Middle and Washington streets. Beautiful American Legion Memorial building and monument on which was placed statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughn Hyatt.

Fort Point, at western side of inner harbor, down Commercial street from Main, fortified in 1743. Now Italian quarter and rendezvous of fishermen of that nationality.

Drives around the Cape: Up Washington street, through Riverdale, past Annisquam, Bay View, Lanesville into Pigeon Cove, Rockport and completing the circuit to Gloucester. Almost a continuous ocean view, which was completed when the Bass Rocks-Land's End stretch was completed.

Beaches: Little Good Harbor and Long Beaches, between Bass Rocks and Land's End, Rockport. Wingsaersheek Beach, West Gloucester, largest on Cape, two miles long, 600 feet deep at low tide; reached from Essex avenue, West Gloucester, down Concord street.

Quarries at Bay View and Pigeon Cove, among largest in country, near main highway.

Blynnan canal, first cut in 1642 by Rev. Richard Blynnan, at Western entrance of city.

Drives: "Little Heater," "Dark Hole" at West Gloucester.

Old Salem road, first highway from the town, blazed out in 1626, when part of the settlers went to Salem. Down Hesperus avenue (discontinued in 1892) to Salem. Name erroneously applied to Old Pest House road, leading through Ravenswood park from Western ave.

ROADWAYS

One road leads to London,
One road leads to Wales,
My road leads me seawards
To the white dipping sails.

One road leads to the river,
As it goes singing slow;
My road leads to shipping,
Where the bronzed sailors go.

Leads me, lures me, calls me
To salt green tossing sea;
A road without earth's road-dust
Is the right road for me.
— John Massfield.

GOLIATH CURLEY VS. LITTLE DAVID LODGE

"Gen'ulmen—In this corner Jim Curley the undefeated champeen. In that Kid Lodge the Essex bantam in a fight for a decision. Now, gen'umen—(this aside to the fighters) "fight clean and break away in the clinches."

So in the parlance of the squared circle we introduce what may become of as much national importance as the presidential election itself; we allude to the United States senatorial fight between the Rt. Hon. James H. Curley and the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Essex—good old Essex county, Massachusetts—and the North Shore.

The colors worn by Mr. Lodge — as announced by his antagonist, are the royal purple; those of the Curley partisans—well, we'll give you one guess. Of course the outcome will be of super-interest to this neck of the woods and sea known as the North Shore, the ancient bailiwick of the Lodges—into which the partisans of the Curleyites have muscled recently much to the surprise and disgust of the Lodge camp followers.

And it will be a battle royal. James Michael is a remarkable man. No doubt of it with hardly more than a medium grade grammar school education left early to shift for himself he embarked on the turbulent and roiled sea of Boston politics where only those of mighty fist, tooth and claw survive the running of the political gauntlet.

Despite these apparent handicaps Curley has developed into the most finished and eloquent speaker in the country in this century and we make the decision after a several years audition, in person or via radio, of the oratorical big shots of all sections, combining a wonderful radio voice with the choicest diction and, tell it not in Sout' Bos'n, the finest Oxonian to be found in this country, for Curley is more catholic in his choice of English than any man in public life. Should chance land him in the Senate he will achieve a reputation, as the most finished orator of his generation. What a fine broth of a boy in knee breeches as ambassador to the Court of St. James?

As his opponent, a worthy antagonist,, one of the Royal Purples, against whom he inveighs with so much acrimony and whose gates he burns to crash. Else, why traveling in the estate of princes of the blood and embellish one's official stationery with one's private coat of arms? "What Ho, within, varlet-let the portcullis fall." The Royal Purple forsooth, reminiscent of fortunes piled up in the slave running days, of letters of marque and Medford rum, the possessors of these fortunes, now, in the precincts of the pre-sanctified—against what shall we say—the Long Green accumulated in the hard-won and fertile "real estate" fields of Boston—although the modest shack of the Curley's forinist the Fenway may never hope to cope with the baronial magnificence of the Colonial farmstead of the Lodge's at Beverly Farms. Well, never mind, Jim the First is one of nature's noblemen. No doubt about that.

Young Lodge is no set up. He comes legitimately by brains and courage. His grandfather—Henry Cabot Lodge—who broke ground before no man when crossing lances. These qualities were demonstrated in the recent senatorial contest when, spurning the bait of an unopposed shot at the Andrew vacant chair, he got the decision in the first round. A finished orator keen witted as a rapier, welcoming a toe to toe contestant. What a drawing card in a joint debate with His Excellency. Evidently these Lodge men choose their wives with discrimination. For blood does tell.

It is charged that he is too young a man for the toga. "The atrocious crime of being a young man I shall not attempt to palliate nor deny" thundered the younger Pitt at the beginning of his parliamentary career. With what gusto we launched out that line in our High school "speaking pieces" days.

This, too, is the age of flaming youth.

And Gov. Curley you'd better mark your step or young Lodge 'll git yer if ye don't watch out. At any rate it looks like the Republican party in the state had uncovered a real leader. To use an old Yankee phrase it had been "running to emptins" in this respect of late.

Well now supposing His Excellency gets defeated? We nominate him for senior professor at Harvard, specializing in correctly enunciated English.

MILK??

Two years ago the press chronicled the fact that a milk producing concern was not delivering the goods the law requires and as a consequence the case came up under court review. Quite recently a similar case—also reported in the press—met similar procedure.

Far be it from The Shore to take up the cudgels in defense of a generation that has drenched its stomach and befuddled its brain with bath-tub gin and denatured alcoholic liquor. We hold no brief for the moronic.

But how about the infants whose sole food is milk? These little fellows cost too much in human affection—and from a financial standpoint also—to trifle with. The human infant scientists say is the most helpless of any living thing that comes into the world. Synthetic or doctored milk deranging the digestion and they fold up and pass on leaving a lifetime of saddened memories.

No doubt all parties concerned in this business regret the occurrence. For there can be no food question concerning which the public need be more sensitive. And it speaks well for the authorities that they have been vigilant in this matter.

WHO'S WHO

This valuable directory of the summer colony of the North Shore comprising the names of all summer residents from Nahant to Rockport is just off the press and contains much information of especial interest. It also contains a map showing the principal points of interest on the North Shore and how to get there. The price is $3.50 postpaid and the publishers The North Shore Press Inc., Manchester, Mass.

THEY SCATTER FLOWERS

By the Gloucester Poet
ALEXANDER GARFIELD TUPPER

Written in recognition of the loyalty of citizens of Gloucester, relatives and friends of the Gloucester fishermen lost at sea, who hold a special service each summer at Blyman Bridge and scatter flowers upon the water to commemorate the bravery and service of the sailors.

They scatter flowers from the shore—
Those bonnie banks of Gloucester Town,
Where roses kiss the ebbing tide
And countless blooms are falling down.

The breath of love on petals fair
That touch the pulse of ocean's swell;
A living tribute to the dead
From loyal folk to bid them well!

O, sullen sea when sun is set
And dusk a pall has overspread
The strange and angry, warring field,
Where falls our dear, brave sailor-dead!

But o'er the voice of breaking sea,
A peace speaks in the salt sea air;
The sun and moon their wands will cast
And make the battling wastes so fair!

As o'er the sea, lies Flanders Field.
So fall with poppies o'er the slain;
We hold in sacredness the spot—
We cannot hate it with disdain!

We love as God loves sons so true
Who serve in life—to honor bend;
Cast we tributes on the sea
Where prayer and God's rich blessings blend.

They scatter flowers from the shore—
Those bonnie banks of Gloucester Town,
Where roses kiss the ebbing tide

Art and Dramatic

On Saturday, July 4, the Gloucester Society of Artists' opened its thirty-seventh exhibition of oils, water colors and sculpture. A delightful tea was served as the custom of the gallery at each opening. Those attending the opening were impressed by the variety and large number of subjects shown. Many familiar names appear on the oils, water colors, and other works, and, as usual, a few new ones. Among the latter might be mentioned Herbert Barnett, whose canvas entitled "The Garden Gate" is beautifully designed and is very much in the modern style.

The marines, always popular subjects, are more diversified than ever and one may easily recognize the scenes as being close at hand. Anthony Thieme, whose name is known to every lover of art on Cape Ann, gives us a harbor scene called "Calm Morning" which is a splendid example of his work. It shows two fishing schooners tied up at the wharves just after sunrise on a calm morning.

Gordan Grant's "Arrivals and Departures" presents one of his characteristic ships in full sail. The accuracy of his rigging and sails is a result of many years study. This is an excellent example of Mr. Grant's work.

Oscar Anderson, president of the society, gives us another of his delightful harbor scenes. This is a scene which Mr. Anderson sees from his studio on Banner Hill. It is a picture of quiet serenity and is well handled in composition.

"Eventide" by Grace Russell is a fine bit of shore painting. This is a splendid piece of work and well executed.

Other marines worthy of mention are: Raymond Carter's "The Emperor Movie Bound"; and Ellen Quigley's "Gill Net Wharves."

Margaret Fitzhugh Browne is showing her portrait of a young colored fighter which she calls "Before the Fight." This is a remarkably striking character study and is executed with Miss Browne's usual skill and ability.

Alfred E. Smith's "Portrait of Mr. Henry F. Smith" is a beautifully finished painting and one of the outstanding ones in the exhibit.

The portrait of "Mrs. Alec Wagnmen" by Jacob Binder is well done—fine in pose and character and well harmonized.

The exhibition of small paintings is exceptionally fine this year. Antoinette Inglis has contributed two of her beautifully done child portraits. M. S. Clinedinst has a beautiful moonlight scene which is very well done. Charles Gruppe has two of his small pastoral landscapes of Holland. Lester Gillette contributes two of his small marines. "Spring" and "Evening" are two fine examples of the work of George Bardwell. Elinor Goodridge contributes two paintings of local subjects, well executed and colorful.

The black and white show, while small, deserves careful attention from the visitors. Among the etching and dryprints Gordon Grant's "Sons of Peter" is prominent. This shows a boat at anchor in the harbor and the men taking out the fish. John Barry has a few well done etchings interesting in style and treatment. An etching entitled "Baiting" by Anthony Thieme shows the same crisp, direct style and pleasing technique found in his paintings. The two etchings by Umberto Romano called "Apple Tree" and "Nagrid" are splendid examples of his work. Also adequate and appealing work is seen by: Neil MacEachern, Alfred Fuller, and Stanley Woodward.

This exhibition continues until August 4 and is open on week days from 10 to 6 and on Sundays from 2 to 6. The second display will open on August 8 and will continue to September 13.

The exhibitors and titles of subjects follow: Paintings, Large Gallery—Ahl, Henry Curtis, The Old Road From the Sea; Anderson, Oscar, In Gloucester Harbor; Annan, A. Hawthorne, Springtime; Anshultz, E., Gloucester's Antiquities; Baldwin, Nixford, A Portrait of Young Women; Bardwell, George W., The Road to Dover; Barnes, Ernest Harrison, Sentinel of the Woodland; Barnett, Herbert, The Garden Gate; Bennett-Brown, M., Delphinium, Lily, Phlox; Binder, Jacob, Mrs. Alec Wagnmen; Briar, Frank, A Study; Browne, Margaret Fitzhugh, Before the Fight; Burdoin, Juliette, Lake Louise; Carter, Raymond, The Emperor Movie Bound; Clinedinst, M. S., Crashing Wave; Colman, Blanche E., Old Copper and Fruit; Cook, John, Fishing Boats; Cox, Charles M., Boats, Gloucester; Cratz, Benjamin, Sperm Whale; Creighton, Bessy E., New England Tryst; Dennison, Charles E., Sunrise on Jeffreys Bank; Enneking, J. Eliot, Apple-

OLD GLOUCESTER NOMENCLATURE

Should Be Preserved As An Historical Memorial To The Early Settlers

LOBSTER COVE, ANNISQUAM — FIFTY YEARS AGO

DOES New England need another society with a long name—the Society for the Preservation of Ancient Names? This inquiry is prompted from the recent airing in the press for the change of the name of Muddy River in Boston to something more aesthetic and "elevating." It must be admitted that in some instances the early English settlers at times used blunt Elizabethan-Saxon in the designation of place names which judged by the more refined standards of today—except in some of the popular quasi-historic novels which delight in digging up appellations for the edification of the unregenerate—grate upon the nerves. The old timers had a habit of calling a spade a spade.

There are some such here which time and practice have modified to names which offend harshly or may be, vulgarly, the ears of the censorious.

A survey of local titles discloses, however, that comparatively few name changes have been made in the early names of Cape Ann in its 313 years of history and it is generally felt that these designations of the early settlers who entered into and developed the land should be retained for historical and sentimental reasons.

Champlain acclaimed Gloucester harbor "Le Beauport"—the harbor beautiful and the name clings in various ways. It should be coming from such a world-connoisseur as this romantic navigator. The first name bestowed by the original settlers from the Dorchesters colony in 1623 was Fisherman's Field, now Stage Fort Park, where the early settlers set up their stage—i. e., wharf—and fishing plant. Changed after to Stage Fort from the fact that the old defenses were thrown up by Capt. Hewes here in 1625. But the rocks in front of what was once Conant Beach—from the first Governor of the colony—are known today as Field Rocks—so set down on Government maps.

Freshwater Cove

Farther along is Freshwater Cove, named because a stream pouring over the flat at low tide "freshened" the water. The early fishermen filled their water kegs there. Then Dolliver's Neck from an early settler. Next Norman's Woe, made famous by Longfellow. The term comes from John Norman a settler of the Dorchester colony who owned the adjacent land.

It was the custom in olden times to commemorate the scene of an outstanding calamity—chiefly shipwrecks—as a "Woe." A happening of this nature gave rise to the name. As far as known this term has disappeared both in England and America except in this one instance—no doubt kept alive by the poet.

Hardby this spot is the well known Rafe's Chasm which once bore a less euphonious name. A fisherman named Ralph—pronounced Rafe by the early settlers—lived nearby hence the term Across the harbor—Eastern Point—

ells its own derivative. Down the back shore is Bemo ledge and Brace's Cove, the origin of both uncertain. Little Good Harbor Beach gets its name because it had a little but good harbor where the fishing boats of Sandy Bay put in for shelter against a head wind o their home port.

Farther along is Thacher's Island which commemorates a tragedy of Aug. 2, 1635, when Anthony Thacher and his company bound from Ipswich to Marblehead in a ketch were overborn and all but Thacher and his wife drowned. Loblolly Cove puzzles many. Loblolly was a food of the early settlers composed of boiled Indian meal and some sort of meat. There was no replace in the small boats of the early fishermen who came ashore at that point and prepared their frugal repast.

Skirting the coastline passing by such names as Hooppole Cove which carry their own derivation—a place where the fishermen cut down the poles o make hoops for their barrels—we come to Pigeon Cove, so named, because n the early days flocks of wild pigeons flew across Ipswich Bay from the Maine coast to feast on the berries that grew n that region. So thick were they that they were said to have obscured the sun's rays. Now they have been destroyed so as to be as extinct as the dodo. One of these flocks caught in a gale as they were crossing the bay were eaten to the sea and drowned. Large numbers were washed on the northern shore hence the name of Pigeon Cove.

Nearby is Folly Cove called by the residents The Folly. Inquiry is often made as to how come? The northerly gales beat fiercely on this unprotected section. No wharf could withstand them. However, an adventurous settler thought it could be done. He built the strongest pier that he could devise and awaited the test. A great ale arose, the rain descended and the hurricane blew mightily. The next morning the settlers looked out. Not a vestige of the structure remained. Hence Galloupe's Folly—Galloupe being the builder; his name long forgotten except by the antiquary.

Coming down the Annisquam River o just above the Blynman Canal is a place known as "Done Fudgin" which is one of the oldest place-names on the Cape. What is now the canal was originally a low neck of land covered at high water by the tide but exposed on the ebb. The fishermen desiring access from the harbor to the river were wont o pole along their craft carefully at high water until they reached a point where the river deepened. This poling process was called in the early vernacular "fudgin" and when the fishermen got to that point where the water was deep and poling no longer necessary they were "done fudgin" and there you have it.

This canal, by the way quite recently christened the Blynman Canal, was the second in New England and the cutting of this neck to joint harbor and river was so obvious an improvement as to lead the General Court in 1639 to appoint a committee of three to report upon a plan to effect this junction. Operations were begun in 1642. In that year Rev. Richard Blynman came over from Plymouth with a group and settled in what is called the Done Fudgin section. He became an active proponent of the project, its advantages being obvious and accordingly this "cut" was made and the Cape Ann converted from a promontory to an island entirely surrounded by water. Up to very recently the bridge across it was and is known by old inhabitants as the Cut bridge. That latter name should always be preserved Blynman who removed to New Haven in 1647, getting his due meed of remembrance in the naming of the canal.

The islands in Squam river have been variously named. What is now Merchant's Island was originally Pearce Island from an early owner. What is now Rust, sometime Annisquam, was originally Biskie Island. Can anyone tell why?

The two islands in Gloucester harbor, Five and Ten Pound, were so named because of the amounts they were sold for in Colonial times. In the harbor on the Eastern Point side is a mass of ledge covered with black kelp named Black Bess. Years ago the favorite yellow covered literature of the day recounted the adventures of Dick Turpin, a celebrated English bandit who roamed along Hampstead heath robbing unprotected travelers—forerunner of the Dillingers and other bandits, but as far as known refraining from homicide. Turpin rode a coal black steed, Black Bess, which became as celebrated as he himself—the rock resembling the mare suggesting the application of the name.

What is now Magnolia was up to 1870 Kettle Cove named from the fact that an early settler named Kettle resided in the locality although another version has it that in England a small cove enclosed by an island was called by the fishermen a "kettle" or a basin for fish, hence the name. It was to this locality that the fishermen of the Dorchester colony removed in 1626 from Fisherman's Field (Stage Fort) as a more sheltered place for their vocation. The descendants of Kettle the early settler spell the name Kettell.

The point to the westward of the cove, now known as Coolidge Point, was originally Goldsmith's Point, and is so designated on the government's charts and the beach is set down as Gray's beach.

ONE FISHBALL

Prof George Martin Lane (1823-1897).
There was a man went round the town,
To hunt a supper up and down;

For he had been right far away,
And nothing had to eat all day.

He feels his cash to count his pence,
And all he had was just six cents.

"Wretch that I am, it happens meet, Why did I leave my Kirkland Street!"

"None but a fool a wife forsakes,
Who raspberry jam and waffles makes.

"If I were now safe out of town,
I'd give my brand-new dressing-gown.

"But yet I'll make a start and try To see what my six cents will buy."

He finds at last a right cheap place,
And stealeth in with bashful face.

The bill of fare he runneth through,
To see what his six cents will do.

The cheapest of the viands all,
Was twelve and one-half for two fishball.

The waiter he to him doth call,
And whispers softly, "One fishball."

The waiter roars it through the hall,
The guests they start at "ONE FISHBALL!"

The waiter brings one fishball on,
The guest he looks abashed down.

The scantness of the fare he sees:
"A piece of bread, now, if you please."

"WE DON'T GIVE BREAD WITH ONE FISHBALL!"

Then who so orders one fishball
Must get bread first or not at all,
And who would two with fixins eat,
Should get some friend to stand a treat.

EASTERN POINT

THE SIAMESE LEGATION is once more established in this locality for summer headquarters, having taken the Holdsworth house "The Sumacs" for the season. The minister, Phya Abhibal Rajamaitri and the Madame, children, staff and secretaries are with them. Later sixteen Siamese students at American colleges will come to a house at Bass Rocks. This legation has been coming to Gloucester constantly, with the exception of one year in the Adirondacks, for nearly forty years, its former secretary being Edward Loftus, one of the British East Indian diplomatic staff, that arrangement having been terminated some years ago. Mrs. Loftus, it will be remembered, was prominent in the social affairs of East Gloucester during her residence here of some thirty years. The young attaches of the embassy in the early days were skilled tennis players and yachtsmen—generally Oxonians. One of these helmsmen of the old East Gloucester club was Nai Choate—the name recalled because of its paralleling the famous Essex county legal light.

The younger element of the Eastern Yacht Club is planning a program of out-door activities through the season. Among the first of these affairs was the old-fashioned seaweed clambake on the rocks in front of the club house Saturday night when all gathered around for the opening of the bake—an old Gloucester institution revived. Isaac Patch Jr., Reginald Elwell and John Nichols 3d are the trio who brought this festivity to a successful conclusion. Among those making reservations were Mrs. William Elwell, who entertained eight, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence A. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Walker, Gordon Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen W. Sleeper and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whittemore. The Saturday night dances are a feature. An extra—that of last night, Friday—was held at the Bass Rocks Golf Club house.

From our New York correspondent comes this piece of gossip: "As you know, the wealthy McCanns (she was a Woolworth), have for years had the big place on Long Island. Their daughter married the Guest chap, famous for polo, and they have bought the Stephen Sleeper place on Eastern

WITH THIS season the Hawthorne Inn rounds out its fiftieth year. Founded and for the greater part of that time managed by the late George O. Stacy, the hostelry with an atmosphere all its own, soon achieved an international reputation shared by its owner. Many are the notables it has entertained. Perhaps some day the writer may conjure up an article concerning this phase. It is gratifying to know that the hotel continues along the same lines—under the management of its second owner Mr. T. A. White—laid down by its founder. Mr. White as a special inducement to mark the golden anniversary, announces that any young couple anxious to embark on the sea of matrimony who will have the knot tied at a public ceremony at the hostelry will receive a honeymoon gift of a stay at the hostelry. Which offer ought to prove attractive.

Speaking of long-lived hotels, the Fairview has been in the Wonson-Renton family for 95 years, first opened by Mrs. William Wonson and is still at the height of its popularity. Down at Pigeon Cove we notice that a claim is made for the Glen Acre house that it has been conducted as such for more than a hundred years. There appears to be a basis for this claim. The Brook colony group came down to Pigeon Cove for the summer between the thirties and forties.

The Rockaway is always a lively place and this year it promises to be "tops" in entertaining. The Hotel has held its Tuesday Bridge Parties and Saturday Night Dances that attract the old and young alike. A gay and varied programme has been planned for the season and pleasing their guests is the motto of proprietor and Mrs. William A. Publicover and the hotel staff.

The first moving picture of the season at Hawthorne Inn was shown July sixth and played to a very good house. A Bridge Party was held Tuesday, July 7 and opened with five tables. Prizes were won by Miss Mabel Vickery of Baltimore, first prize for contract; Miss Florence Basshor of Baltimore, first prize for mahjong. The door prize was won by Mrs. George F. Rute of Buffalo.

MILADY GOES SHOPPING

Gloucester, Mass.

Dear Eloise,

Much to my surprise, I am still able to write you a letter. I am completely exhausted because of my utter slavery to Mrs. Marsh.

You see, Eloise, it all happened this way. Our next-door neighbor, Mrs. Oglethorpe, told Mrs. Marsh about the most extraordinary blueberries she had found in the woods about a mile from her house, and nothing would stop Mrs. Marsh—she must go blueberry-picking. Consequently, I was elected to go into town to find some sort of a receptacle to satisfy her most desirous wants. It immediately occurred to me that L. E. Andrews was the place to go! I found a nice basket that would serve the purpose. I knew it was too fancy for blueberry-picking, but Mrs. Marsh must have the best! (That is just like the dear.)

The next morning, Mrs. Marsh and Mrs. Oglethorpe started off for the woods.

About noon they returned and what do you suppose had happened to Mrs. Marsh! Due to her lack of the knowledge of botany, she had come in contact with poison ivy. On seeing its nice shiny leaves, she thought they would go wonderfully well with a table bouquet, and picked them. Because of poison ivy, Mrs. Marsh is completely "done up" in bandages, and being nurse-maid to her is the cause of my fatigue.

Mr. Marsh has received a reply to his telegram to Hornblower & Weeks, and has been trying in vain to collaborate with me about it. Being aware of the tranquility of Stage Coach Inn, he suggested we dine there. We enjoyed our luncheon immensely and I am sure the food cannot be surpassed. After lunch, we sat before one of the ancient fireplaces and talked over his business affairs.

On the way back from Stage Coach Inn, Mr. Marsh said that his business transactions were completed for the day. I told him I had been invited to a formal dinner that evening (just a little hint for the afternoon off). Mr. Marsh smiled, and said, "Oh, I realize women never have anything to wear. Why don't you go to the shop where you bought that pretty yellow dress last week?" (I didn't think he noticed it, but evidently he did.)

So I went to the Mimi Shop and there I spotted an adorable dress. It was a flowered chiffon of the most beautiful shades of rose, orchid, and blue. It was made in long, flowing lines and tied with a dainty little bow in the front. The only ornamentations were two pearl clips at the neck. It was a stunning dress for the price. Fate was with me—it was a perfect fit, so I made up my mind that this dress should be included in my wardrobe.

Much to my chagrin, I found I did not have enough money with me, even though it was a small amount. However, I went right up to the Gloucester National Bank to withdraw the money to pay for it.

After procuring my dress, I sojourned up Main Street and gazed in the window of the gas and electric companies. There, I spied an adorable table lamp. It had a nice, shiny gold base made in the shape of a candle-holder. The shade was parchment and of the nautical type, designed with an anchor and stars. I thought it might pacify Mrs. Marsh because of her disastrous mishap. She was delighted with it because it reminded her of her thrilling encounter with the handsome lifeguard.

To be sure, this was not all the shopping I had to do, but the Marsh household has the good habit of never rushing into things, so I knew I would not be reprimanded for leaving the remainder of my shopping until another time.

Jerry VanVoorhees (one of the fellows I met at the beach) had asked me to play tennis. I slipped on my culottes (you remember, the ones I bought at Mimi's), and we had a rousing game of tennis before dinner.

By this time, I was famished and greatly delighted when Jerry suggested we dine out. We had an exceptionally appetizing fresh mackerel dinner. The mackerel was so delicious that we inquired from whom they had purchased it. We found we could get it right in Gloucester—at Gorton's!

The next morning (with memories of a most enjoyable evening), I was "all pepped up" to continue my shopping.

My first stop was at the First National Store. I bought a tasty fresh baked ham, potatoes, peas, string beans, carrots, and all the other goodies that go to make up an extra-special dinner.

From there, I went to L. E. Andrews' to buy kitchen utensils for the bride's home, including a coffee pot, tea-kettle, saucepans, pie plates, and a double boiler. They specialize in "Mirro" ware, proven to be very satisfactory.

Before I went home, I had to take care of Mr. Marsh's banking affairs. I went to the Co-operative Bank and made a payment on his loan, then to the Cape Ann National Bank to get his statements.

Everything for the day attended to, I went home. Our refrigerator is not in very good working order, so I took the groceries over to Joan's house to put them in her Coolerator. (I forgot to mention her house is next to ours.)

I went back from Joan's house and found Mr. Marsh is the study. He was perusing some personal mail and the poor dear looked all tired out. So I suggested a swim to refresh him. We went to the beach and took along a medicine ball for a little exercise. We met Jerry at the beach and I introduced him to Mr. Marsh. He was quite impressed with him, but said he hoped I would like his son as well as I liked Jerry.

Oh, Eloise, I have forgotten to tell you the news I suppose you have been waiting for—Charles (Mr. Marsh's son) will not return for another week. So my enthusiasm lingers. Let's hope he does not disappoint us again.

Until next week,

C. ANNE SHORE.

OUTER CAPE ANN

Mr. and Mrs. Stedman S. Hanks, who have been spending a few weeks at their summer place in Manchester, will sail on the Brittanic on July 23 from New York, planning to spend the rest of the summer abroad and return on Sept. 4, when they will take up their residence in a New York apartment. . . . While in France they will visit Mr. and Mrs. Charles Prince at Nord Noullet in Provence, where Arthur Brisbane is just now a house guest, later going to England and Scotland, where they will stay at Lithgow Castle near Edinburgh, Mrs. Hanks's mother's family estate. . . . It is also whence the Arthur Lithgow Devens derive their name.

Mrs. Justine W. Griess of Hamilton sailed recently for Europe with her two daughters, Miss Joan and Miss Anne Griess.

Back from a visit to the American legation in Toronto, Canada, is Mrs. William Phillips of Wenham and Mrs. J. H. Lancashire is on visiting her daughter, Mrs. E. Lawrence White during July.

Mrs. James Means of "Meadow Ledge," Proctor street, Manchester, is planning a pleasant sojourn in England accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. J. B. W. Waller (Agnes Means) and her children, Agnes and Tony Waller. With her will be her brother, Commander Lloyd Bankson, U.S.N., retired. Mrs. Means' son-in-law, Lieutenant Commander Waller, U.S.N., is leaving on the new destroyer U. S. S. Mahan of which he has command, going on the first trip or "shake down crew," and they will all meet in England during the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. James McG. Means and their small daughter, Sarah Yarnall Means, who are now at "Meadow Ledge," will remain there for the summer.

Matters are quiet at Magnolia. Quite a difference from years ago when the place was the social capital of the New England shore north of Cape Cod. Times and men change. What life there is there centers at the Beach Club.

Mrs. Arthur M. McArthur of Park avenue, New York, who has had the Winslow house for several seasons, will not be in Magnolia this summer. The house has been leased by Gordon Morrill Jr., of Boston, and the family plan a stay late into the fall.

At Abbadia Mare for a short stay are Dr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond.

Miss Elizabeth Hammond, at Look-out Hill, has had as a recent guest, Mrs. E. Coppee Thurston of New York City. Mrs. Thurston is a cousin of Miss Hammond.

Mr. Richard P. Hammond is frequently seen cruising about the harbor in his Criss Craft, "Miss Judy." Mr. Hammond has taken occupancy of his new home at Dolliver's Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Bradlee of Winchester have had as recent guests, Mr. and Mrs. R. Gordon Scott of Dedham.

The Otis Weld Richardsons of Brookline, whose home is one of the show places at Magnolia, will not be here this season it is stated. The Richardson family for two generations are among the oldest in summer residence in this section.

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Esson and family of West Newton are again occupying "Pine Hill" cottage.

"Kenmare" cottage in Magnolia continues to be the mid-season home of Mr. and Mrs. James J. E. O'Connell and family of Newton.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Jones and family have opened "Willowbank" corner Hesperus avenue and Fuller street.

Courtenay Guild and sister, Miss Sarah Louise Guild of Boston, are again established in "Red Gables" cottage for the season.

Mrs. Richard Halsey of Boston is established for the season in her Shore road cottage.

Miss Susan Williams of Boston came in June to her summer house in Magnolia avenue.

Mrs. J. D. Cox of Cleveland and family were among the June arrivals at "Pine Knoll" cottage, Hesperus avenue. The Cox family is one of the longest in point of residence in Magnolia.

Mrs. R. E. Livingstone of Brookline was among the June arrivals. Her cottage is in Norman avenue.

Returning to Magnolia for another season is Mrs. John S. Zinsser of New York. They have the Wadsworth cottage in Oakes Field.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Heaton Brainard of Pittsburgh opened "Briar Rock" their Shore road cottage in June.

Mr. Arthur Raymond Brown of 425 Riverside drive, N. Y., has again taken "Raebroun" in Raymond street.

MAGNOLIA BEACH CLUB

THE Magnolia Beach Club is in full swing with its usual gay affairs. One hundred and fifty people celebrated the holiday with a buffet supper, fireworks, and dance. Those who entertained were: Albert D. Trenongor, T. R. Madden, Mrs. W. H. Coburn, Mrs. Charles Wadsworth, Miss Barbara Gage, Mrs. John Zinsser and Mrs. W. G. Rueter

An attraction at the Club this season, is Ruby Newman and his orchestra (of the Casino) rendering an interesting musical programme Saturday mornings.

Another bit of good news is the announcement of Charles Naus, 2d, as tennis instructor. With such a capable instructor, Magnolia may be well represented in any tennis tournament.

EASTERN POINT TRIO LEADS AT ROCKPORT

ROCKPORT, July 13—At the end of a full day's racing program, Eastern Point Yacht Club junior crew led three others in the Curtis cup elimination series for this season, the winner of which will sail in the final series at Marblehead starting Thursday.
In the final point standing after Sandy Bay's representatives, twice winners, had been disqualified, Eastern Point had a half-point margin over Manchester, Conomo point was third and Sandy Bay was the anchor berth.
In view of the closeness of the racing, the judges announced that, as much as the series was held to

THE TRAMP

David McCord, in Scribner's Magazine

Her papers read "The Duchess" out of Sydney,

And I have seen her like along the quays:

Old tonnage of a similar spit kidney,
Differing only as a tree from trees.

But this was one green sunny day she drove

Into the gulf in red paint and black patches,

With the lake iron from an inland cove,

And a strong sea washing down her hatches.

And a oiler and the cook leaned over the after

Rail, and they and a stiff beard at the wheel

Kept to themselves a bit of ribald laughter

And the fine business of an even keel.

When she went down that night, they said a rocket

Shone like an eyeball reddening in its socket.

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

In the year nineteen hundred and thirty-two,

AN ORDINANCE

providing for certain ISOLATED "STOP" signs.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE
MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

SECTION 1—Every driver of a vehicle, bus or other conveyance, approaching an intersecting way at which there exists facing him, an official sign, authorized by this Municipal Council, said sign having apart from this regulation, the written approval of the Department of Public Works of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and bearing the word "STOP" shall before entering and proceeding through the intersection, bring such vehicle, bus or other conveyance to a complete STOP at such line as may be clearly marked, or, if there is no line so marked, at a place between the said sign and the line of the street intersection.

In the case of a line of two or more vehicles approaching such "STOP" sign, the drivers of the second and third vehicles in any group shall not be required to stop more than once at said designated line or place or in the immediate vicinity.

This ordinance shall not apply when the traffic is otherwise directed by a police officer or by other lawful traffic regulating signal or device.

SECTION 2—In accordance the foregoing, the Municipal Council hereby authorize the erection and maintenance of an official "STOP" sign or "stop" sign as to face:

1—North and southbound drive on Magnolia avenue at Western avenue.

2—Northbound drivers on tennial avenue at Washington street.

3—Southbound drivers on tennial avenue at Western avenue.

4—Southbound drivers on tennial street at Main street.

SECTION 3—Any persons guilty of violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars ($20.00) each offense.

SECTION 4—All acts or omissions of acts inconsistent herewith hereby repealed.

SECTION 5—This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after the expiration of (10) days from the date of its final passage.

In Municipal Council, April 1932.

Passed first and second readings and to be enrolled.

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

Attention is called to the following provisions of an ordinance governing Gloucester Harbor. Sec. 44(a).

POWER BOATS — MUFLERS

(a) Power driven boats shall not exceed a speed of ten (10) miles per hour in the inner harbor, and for the purposes of determining what is the inner harbor, same shall comprise all the waters of Gloucester harbor lying northeasterly of an imaginary line extending from the spindle standing southwesterly of the Tarr & Wonsom copper paint factory directly across to the Fort Wharf, or by whatever name said wharf may be called.

(b) Boats with internal combustion engines shall be provided and equipped with a muffler or underwater exhaust of a type or types approved by and used in conformity with the rules and regulations authorized by the Commissioner of Public Safety, so that the noise of the same shall not cause unreasonable annoyance to persons in the vicinity of said boats.

LOBSTER POTS PROHIBITED

(c) Lobster or fish pots and similar contrivances attached to the surface with a rope and buoy floating on the surface, shall not be set, established, or maintained in the channel of Annisquam River, nor in the channels of the principal arms thereof, nor in the regularly used fairways in Gloucester harbor and waters adjacent thereto, nor within the courses laid out for races maintained by the Eastern Point Yacht Club and the Annisquam Yacht Club, nor anywhere else so as to unreasonably restrict the free use and navigation of said waters, unless a permit in writing is issued by the State Department of Public Works.

Any violation of this section shall be punished by a fine of Twenty Dollars ($20) for each offense.

POINTS OF INTEREST

Gloucester, Cape Ann — First white man to visit its shores was Thorwald in 1004. Harbor called by Norsemen "Krossanes." Gosnold landed here in 1602 and found the place had been used as a base by Portuguese fishermen. In 1605 Champlain sailed by the Cape but did not land. The next year, September 1606, he entered the harbor which he named Le Beauport and made a map of it. Attacked by 200 Indians and sailed away the next day. In 1614 Capt. John Smith named it Cape Ann after Anne of Denmark, mother of King Charles I. First permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder. Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern Point. Dog Bar breakwater extends from a half mile long, completed in 1904 and extends from this point. On Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ram-

parts" occupies site of Fort Independence.

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the Cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenswood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from Fresh Water Cove or the so-called Old Salem road, Western avenue. Mason Walton's cabin, "Hermit of Bond's Hill," on this road. Well worth frequenting.

Beacon or Governor's Hill, near center of city, from Washington street. Small reservation at top from which a fine view may be obtained.

Dogtown Commons, site of deserted Revolutionary settlement. Reached from Gee avenue, Riverdale. Fine example of boulder deposits of glacial period. "Whale's Jaw," best known of these boulders, at edge of common. Rocking stone, etc., now taken over by the city as a water shed.

Wharves skirting the water front, interesting as affording "close-up" of fish curing, etc.

Babson House, opposite Ellery House, erected by Col. John Low about 1745. Old slave pens in attic.

Main street, first known as Fore, afterwards as Front street. Principal business avenue. Laid out 1642. Middle street, paralleling Main, contains many old colonial houses and the Judith Sargent house, the grounds of which, originally extending to Main street have been restored.

On Middle street are the First Parish (Unitarian) Church, oldest in Gloucester; Independent Christian (Universalist) first Universalist society in America, church edifice erected 1805; St. John's Episcopal Church, Trinity Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Sawyer Free Library and Reading Room, Middle street, adjoining Unitarian church. Interior fine specimen of colonial woodwork. Originally home of Thomas Sanders, merchant.

Old Town Hall Square, at junction of Middle and Washington streets. Beautiful American Legion Memorial building and monument on which was placed statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughn Hyatt.

Fort Point, at western side of inner harbor, down Commercial street from Main, fortified in 1743. Now Italian quarter and rendezvous of fishermen of that nationality.

Drives around the Cape: Up Washington street, through Riverdale, past Annisquam, Bay View, Lanesville into Pigeon Cove, Rockport and completing the circuit to Gloucester. Almost a continuous ocean view, which was completed when the Bass Rocks-Land's End stretch was completed.

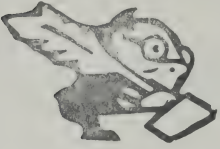

Beaches: Little Good Harbor and Long Beaches, between Bass Rocks and Land's End, Rockport. Wingersheek Beach, West Gloucester, largest on Cape, two miles long, 600 feet deep at low tide; reached from Essex avenue, West Gloucester, down Concord street.

Quarries at Bay View and Pigeon Cove, among largest in country, near main highway.

Blynman canal, first cut in 1642 by Rev. Richard Blynman, at Western entrance of city.

Drives: "Little Heater," "Dark Hole" at West Gloucester.

Old Salem road, first highway from the town, blazed out in 1626, when part of the settlers went to Salem. Down Hesperus avenue (discontinued in 1892) to Salem. Name erroneously applied to Old Pest House road, leading through Ravenswood park from Western ave.

Who seeks for Heaven alone to save his soul
May keep the path but will not reach the goal—
While he who walks in love may wander far Yet God will bring him where the blessed are.

—HENRY VAN DYKE

TO BE WON IN THE MID-WEST

WELL, they're off. The great American presidential race which the key-noters on both sides declare "is fraught with the most crucial and vital import since the foundation of the Republic." Perhaps.

Landon against Roosevelt—or rather the New Deal vs. the Old Regime. What chance success? The Literary Digest which conceived the idea of pre-election straw balloting on a large scale and has been surprisingly successful in its capacity to predict the result inclines (as of June 1) to the belief that the contest is not to be a runaway, although giving the edge to Roosevelt. All other pre-polling adventures prior to the nominations point that way. But they indicated a "fighting chance for the Republicans."

It is admitted that the Republicans have placed in nomination their strongest standard bearers from a political and geographical standpoint. The west is in the saddle. The polling contests agree substantially that the indications are that New England will vote Republican and that New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and the industrial-agrarian states of the middle west are in the balance. The Southern tier—the razor-back confederacy—is more solidly Democratic than ever. The territory west of the Mississippi, it is claimed, is solidly Democratic. The Republicans must in addition to carrying a solid East have a substantial number of the middle west.

How much state pride may enter into this thing is a question. Landon, Pennsylvania born, may sway the voters of the Keystone state. But there is no doubt of his ability to sweep his own native state and its twin, Nebraska. In Illinois and Ohio the great surprise came in his decisive sweep over Borah in a territory which had been conceded to the latter. No denying his strength.

Although not Illinois born Knox is identified with the fortunes of that state, sufficiently to be of its soil as to have the status of a native son—in a territory where practically all are recent comers. The Republicans have a good a chance there and in Ohio as the Democrats.

In addition the Roosevelt cause in that section as well as in the country at large—except in the South—which is off the Republican reckoning—is tremendously handicapped by the fact that the great city and country press is almost solidly lined up against the Democracy. In Chicago and throughout the country the great chain of Hearst papers—largely accountable for placing Landon in nomination—and Col. Knox's own powerful daily which influences and molds opinion in the West, are aggressively for Landon. Then take the farmer press almost solidly aligned in the Republican row. Senator Capper of Kansas monopolizes a chain of the country press in that section—preaching the Republicanism of Landon. Roosevelt in this most important respect of publicity is practically hamstrung. His only recourse is the radio. Even in New York he breaks less than even in this important respect.

Coming East what are the chances? The Digest's and other pollings indicate that New York State is debatable, the agrarian section Republican, while Manhattan and the cities are decidedly Democratic. But here again comes an old factor to be reckoned with. Tammany has been practically ignored by the Administration. Its leaders and followers are sore. But they have a habit of keeping their grievances to themselves and registering their resentments on election day. In the past they have determined presidential elections. Are they going to tear their shirts off for the Administration? History has it that the Republicans have aforesworn swapped off votes with them to the mutual advantage of both. History may repeat itself.

One of the negro speakers at the Republican convention in placing a candidate in nomination for the vice presidential nomination made this significant statement. "Our people in 1932 for the first time deserted the party which gave them freedom but we have returned solidly to the party this year." There are a hundred thousand votes, men and women, in the Harlem district most of which went Democratic in 1932. If they backtrack—what? The Italian vote in the city will go solidly Democratic. Reason—sanctions, ignored, if you get the idea.

Another great factor in New York City—one out of every three inhabitants—the Hebrew vote. This element views political contents from one point alone and that is "Which party is best for the business interests of the country?" And a mighty good yardstick it must be admitted. From their powerful international banking houses down to the smallest enterprise this will be the crucial test at the ballot box.

Of all things, these' super-business men desire a stable and sound currency fixed on the one and only basis which counts the world over—gold.

Landon went courageously out of his way to declare to the nominating convention that he favors a monetary system based on the gold standard, demonstrating that he has backbone. The policy of the present administration in regard to fixed value of the gold dollar has not been exactly reassuring. However, it has accumulated the largest gold reserve in vaults in the national history.

Now turn to the Roosevelt bright side. Its big potential asset—the X of the problem—the earned increment accruing from the colossal outlay of billions in relief work. True it is that many of its recipients rebel against the necessity of its acceptance. The ambitious young man doesn't want to be submerged into virtually a peonage class, his wife and children borne down and branded with the stigmata of pauperism. Much of this rebellion is reported throughout the country. On the contrary, especially in the large cities, are swarms that have no qualms whatever on this point—the question of self-respect does not enter into their calculations. It may be true as has been charged, that this group has little gratitude, having been educated to the idea that the government is duty bound to support them anyway and may bite the hands that feed them—no matter who may be taxed out of the earnings of a lifetime by the process. But gratitude has been defined by some cynic as a lively sense of favor to come, not what has been received, and by that same token that noble army of the hard-worked may be depended upon to line up with the gran almoners of the national dough dish or

OLD DOGTOWN

By Alexander Garfield Tupper

The paths are deep o'er hubbled road,
Where feet of early settlers
trod;

Where thorny vines and thickets lie
And cedars point up to the sky;

Where sweet the breath of pink wild rose
Is mingled with each wind that blows;

The nectar of the ocean's bowl,
That simmers where the great waves roll!

From heights, our gaze for miles can reach
The dim shore lines beyond the beach;

And silence broken by the bird—
Her song, with nature sweet is heard!

A place of joy and beauteous rest—
A spot on earth's fair bosom prest!

On winding roads, through hub-bled hills,
Our feet pass o'er the sacred soil

Where folks of Dogtown often
trod—
Where God of Nature blessed their toil

And gave them solace where they found
A refuge during war's grim strife!

On Dogtown's lovely, flowered ground,
The grey stones mark the resting place

Of many a pilgrim, where he paused
From toil, with weather-beaten face,

The rose of morn upon his cheek,
To hear the sea's strange under-tone—

Voices that sing good will or woe Drift o'er from sands of Win-gaersheek!

A cadence comes with laugh or moan
On winds of destiny that blow!

Art and Dramatic

OPENING OF A NEW ART GALLERY AT ROCKPORT

By "Nemo"

The Barn Door has been opened by Mrs. Marguerite Preble and is not run under the so-called New Deal. The collection of some 300 paintings, water colors, etchings, pencil drawings and tempera sketches. Antiques, pewter and glass is also exhibited. The Barn Door is next to the Blacksmith Shop on South street just off Rock square. Mrs. Preble has left the old barn in its former state of century year minus the haymows and other accessories which go to make up any well regulated barn of the East. Of course pictures would not line out like stars at night on the old brown aged boards, so the manager has covered half the barn walls with a roofing paper which is adaptable for a background for paintings. The walls teem with the works of seasoned artists who come to Rockport to paint and enjoy the arty atmosphere of this quaint old town by the rockbound coast.

It would seem that Rockport is like a magnet drawing many artists and art students from all over this country and the urge is so great on their arrival that it does not take the artists long to shed their city clothes for smocks, berets and then to the painting grounds. About the first subject is Motif No. 1 and then the streets of Rockport with its snowy white houses. There is a long list of paintable subjects at which to wield a paint brush.

Now the old Barn Door Gallery beckons the people from the sidewalk into its well-stocked gallery, there to feed one's soul on good, wholesome art which is not tainted by modernism. This gallery did not have to feature a pink tea in order to bait the would-be-buyers into this exhibit of worthwhile work. This show stands for art with a large "A."

There are forty artists exhibiting, mostly those who summer at Rockport and Gloucester. The exhibitors are as follows: Alfred V. Churchill, former art director of Smith's College, Northampton; Earl E. Sanborn, famous stained-glass designer; Blanche E. Colman, Stanley Woodward, Galen J. Perritt, Marion P. Stone, former art editor of the Boston Journal; John M. Buckley, Samuel Hershey, chairman of the Jury for 1936 of the Rockport Art Association, Parker Perkins, Harry Leith-Ross, Harry Vincent, Dawson Watson, winner of the $5,000 cactus contest for one of his oil paintings exhibited in Arizona; G. T. Margeson, Emile A. Gruppe, M. Bennett-Brown, Elizabeth R. Wetherington, Charles Knapp, Lester Stevens, May Wagner, Cora Holden, George L. Boutillier, P. J. Paul, Elinor Goodridge, E. R. Wait, F. M. Rines, Ruth Swett, noted etcher; Aldro T. Hibbard, Sidney Raynes, Jacquelin Hudson, Addison Le Boutilier, Gordon Grant, artist, etcher and playwright; John Taylor Arms and Thomas Nason.

We have only space for a few of the artists who have climbed near and to the top rungs of the art ladder of fame, and the artists who are not quite at the top but are still stepping fast and will no doubt be among some of the top-notchers before very long with A.N.A.'s and N.A.'s attached to their names.

While Emil Gruppe does not wear flocks of medals on his chest he can still paint a good picture, and "Wonder Bird," "Bickford's Float" are among the paintings shown in the exhibit. Lester Stevens technique is centered on a rock study, and the painting has a searchlight-effect thrown over it, for it would seem that Lester knew his pigments, and his paintings always dominate the central position in an art gallery. Perkins and Perritt are masters of seascapes and their work always makes a nice note of color, and pleasing to look at. Harry Vincent has a fine sketch of an Italian scene; his work was always admired by the reviewer. Marion Sloan has captured the very atmosphere of the mountains, and her mountain river painting is delicate in color tones.

What would any exhibition be without Motif No. 1? John Buckley has sent this well-known subject done in the winter time, when mother earth is wrapped in a mantle of snow. This exhibition is free to the public, and Mrs. Preble extends a cordial invitation to attend.

WAITING

(By John Burroughs)

Serene, I fold my hands and wait,
Nor care for wind, or tide, or sea;

I rave no more 'gainst time or fate,
For, lo! my own shall come to me.

I stay my haste, I make delays,
For what avails this eager pace?
I stand amid the eternal ways,
And what is mine shall know my face.

Asleep, awake, by night or day,
The friends I seek are seeking me;
No wind can drive my bark astray,
Nor change the tide of destiny.

What matter if I stand alone?
I wait with joy the coming years;
My heart shall reap where it has sown,
And garner up its fruit of tears.

The waters know their own and draw
The brook that springs in yonder height;
So flows the good with equal law,
Unto the soul of pure delight.

The stars come nightly to the sky;
The tidal wave unto the sea;
Nor time, nor space, nor deep, nor high,
Can keep my own away from me.

A "TRANSPLANTED" COLONIAL HOUSE

Brought From Connecticut And Set Up In The Bass Rocks District

"AS ANCIENT IS THIS HOSTELRY AS ANY IN THE LAND MAY BE."

No doubt about that. Built and used as a Tavern in 1649 and continued as such 200 years. In the last century known as The Old Freeman House—now The Stage Coach Inn. Photo taken just before restoration.

ON THE RIDGE OF LAND paralleling the road from Gloucester in the Bass Rocks section has recently been reconstructed a house of the earliest New England type of which there are several examples on Cape Ann, the two-storied oblong structure with what is termed in this locality a leanto, in the rear, the roof sloping down to a one story height—the service end of the house, in New England.

At first glance the casual observer might wonder why the builder put his house in such an exposed position galeswept as it is by land and sea for the early colonial was careful to protect himself from the elements by building under the lee of a hill or bluff fronting southward.

An experienced antiquary, specializing in old houses soon detects one of two features of construction alien to Essex county architecture, outstanding of which is the center chimney built of large oblong blocks of light grayish mica stone not indigenous to this region.

The explanation is that the house has been transferred here. Harry S. Conant, born and "raised" in Gloucester, now of Bridgewater, is one of those specialists in old houses.

Motoring through Thompson, (not Thompsonville) Conn., he noticed an abandoned house in the outskirts. He had no trouble in buying it, having a commission from a client Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ingraham of Cambridge for just such a structure.

His father owned quite a tract of land in the Bass rocks section here and that was selected as the new site. So with a gang he set at work laboriously taking apart the solid oaken timbers of more than two centuries—seemingly hardened by age, loaded them on twelve trucks and carted them to the present site.

In those days wooden bolts called trunnels (dictionary-trenails)—were used in ship and housebuilding. These were forced out and numbered as every timber, plank and board in house and reassembled as in the original. The house was built by Dr. Shapley in 1708. Mr. Conant thinks it is an assemblage of two houses, what is termed the addition in reality be a house built earlier on another and removed to and joined with original structure—this conclusion arrived at from various signs, additions apparent to the expert these matters but to the ordinary server it appears as if built at time so well is it coordinated. Conant will point out where the ends of the beams and timbers of the original house joins those of the supposed second section.

While there are some embellishments of a later period the house remains as originally built, a good specimen of the earliest type of the white-do-colonial farmer or shipman with a large family which was the vogue of those days. For instance porway of the house with its fluted columns is of the type, affected by the prosperous, just before the Revolution. It might well have been added by that generation of occupants and by no means swears at the original. It was picked up by Mr. Conant from the Hosea Ballou house in Cumberland, R. I. A similarly ornate corner cupboard of the same later period has been installed in the dining room—a indication of the Forsyte progress, upward in the world — as regards human habitations.

But all in all the old colonial domiciles, the sumpter beams chamfered and stopped, the wide floor boards (the original) painted with yellow and other colors—the early settlers used yellow ochre—as was the custom before “sanding” and later home-made rugs came into fashion. Old wide wall wide boarding is retained in the interior and the sturdy wooden parlor latch, as of old with the latch-ring survives. Reproductions of early colonial wall paper have been placed in some of the rooms.

Of course all old houses have their secret doors—this one—two of them. Their general location will be pointed out. Find and open them if you can, as when explained. Handy to escape one's creditors or the sheriff.

One leads by a devious winding, confusing route—calculated to throw the pursuer off the scent—to a large space formerly unoccupied in which a gas heating apparatus has been installed but there is no indication of it throughout the house the registers being artfully concealed by panels high up. And this reminds one that the rooms are low-studded about seven feet.

In the rear or service end is the huge fire place of some seven feet breadth in which a quarter cord of wood might have been burned at once, when wood was plentiful and inexpensive. All the old kitchen utensils are there. Above is a lintel twelve by ten of solid oak some of which had been charred and fallen off, but restored by the joiner—shipwrights of the marine railways. And in this service room—the old time colonial books had ample elbow room—is another secret entrance worked by another sort of mysterious open sesame gadget.

Originally the house had a cellar reached from the inside of the house. There was a departure from the Cape Ann scheme which had the cellar door entrance from the outside from which the theme—motif of a song of long ago boyhood days “Old Grimes Cellar Door.”

The stout steps of this cellar were constructed in a peculiar manner of foot square oak logs sawed diagonally in two and bolted down (with trunnels) solidly on four inch runway planks. Their name “puncheon stairs.” Why—?. What is a puncheon stair may some of the younger generation ask? A puncheon, was a large narrow shaped hogshead capacity from 60 to 150 gallons. Its contents were generally—in these parts the habitat of seafaring men—Jamaica, Bacardi, Porto “Reek,” Santa Cruz or other delectable decoctions brought home and stored in the cellar in case of sickness or otherwise. “West Injy” goods was the sign of the local grocers who sold in smaller quantities to the retail trade.

This puncheon with two or three stout fellows on the long bight of a parbuckle rope was lowered down these steps into the cellar and placed on a low skid, end out with a wooden spigot in the lower side of the head. This has been placed on the stairs on the western side of the service end of the house. Its general appearance shows that it received rough usage in its days.

Now the Gloucester mariners of these old days, “when man lived in a grander way and dispensed ampler hospitality” used hard Cape Ann granite for their cellar steps—than which there is no tougher known—the Connecticut white stone being of a softer and less resisting composition. And this primes the memory that the outstanding feature which greets the visitor is the original door step of the house carefully set in the pathway six feet square, eight inches thick and weighing two and a half tons. It is of a sort of mica stone found in the Connecticut territory.

A rollicking ditty, of the olden time, now out of vogue, had that big was-sail bowl, the puncheon, for its inspiration. The opening verse

“I wish I had a barrel of rum and sugar a hundred pound
A puncheon tub to put it in and a stick to stir it round,” etc. etc.

The Jolly Good fellow song of ye olden tyme. A puncheon tub was made by sawing a headed hogshead exactly in two—in common use by fishermen up to recently.

To enumerate the numerous features about the house, butterfly hinges and the like names which fall trippingly off the tongue of those in the know would be quite a catalogue.

Suffice to stay the undoubted inspiration of these old houses in Connecticut came from Cape Ann. It is particularly interesting to note that in the Nutmeg states Tercentenary observance of last year that Cape Ann contributed some its best stock-names that have carried on governors, judges, business men, theologians, professional men and others. In 1647 Rev. Richard Blynman who had come over to Cape Ann from Plymouth in 1642 having had a row with the Pilgrims, decided to move on to what is now Connecticut territory. So with him went Obadiah Bruen first town clerk, who carried off the first town records which were never recovered, William Addes, Christopher Avery, Hugh Calkin, (who died in Norwich in 1690) John Coit, John Collins, John and William Durgée, William Hough, William Kenie, Thomas Kent, ancestor of the famous Chancellor Kent, jurist, William Meades, Ralph Parker, Hugh Pritchard, John Sadler, William Southmeade, William Wellman, and others. All did not go with Blynman but departed a few years later after he had spied out the land and sent back favorable news. The most of the subsequent departures were in 1658 although there are a few between that time and Blynman's going.

In fact the first covered wagon trek to the Western Reserve which was eventually stopped at the Golden gate originated in Greater Cape Ann district by Rev. Manasseh Cutler of the Ipswich district. Blynman undoubtedly made his removal to New London by water where the Cape Anners settled. There was a Cape Ann lane there up to a few years ago, if indeed the name does not survive today.

During the past fifty years there has been an unnecessary destruction of these very early houses. The Richard Dike mansion, as it was termed now the old Wheeler house at Wheelers point circa 1688, the Sylvester Everleigh tavern at West Gloucester 1648 still a going tavern “as ancient as any in the land may be,” the Rev. John White house built about 1710 known now as the Ellery house and the Old Castle at Pigeon cove are examples surviving, the Everleigh and White house having the second story overhang with ornamental pendants all of the same generic type as the Connecticut structure, transplanted to Cape Ann soil.

EASTERN POINT

The presence of the large ocean-going steam yachts, Viking owned by George F. Baker of New York and the Placida of Wilmington, Del., in the harbor during the week lent a decidedly picturesque touch to the seascape. Invariably the owner, when here for the first time descendant on the great desirability of Gloucester in every respect—fine and secure anchorage—a base of supplies, including marine railways, ship chandlery, outfitings, provisions, water, etc., not to be equalled along the coast. In days to come when the Eastern Point Yacht clubhouse shall become an actuality Gloucester will become the leading yacht rendezvous along the Atlantic coast for the largest as well as the craft of more modest size.

Miss Lucy Taggart, sister of a prominent Indiana politician, Hon. Thomas Taggart, has after an absence of one season returned to occupancy of her home at Eastern Point.

Mrs. Alonzo Wilder Pollard and family of Boston returned in June to "Barlevento" which she has made her summer home for a number of seasons.

Mrs. Edwin Bradley Currier of Boston is in occupancy of her cottage in Fort Hill road.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. F. McCann (Woolworth) and family of New York who last season purchased "Beauport," for years the summer home of the late Harry Sleeper, have come to the house for the season. Their ocean-going yacht, one of the largest on the coast which has been a conspicuous object in the harbor for the past two seasons, has not yet made this port.

Mrs. Frances M. Carter of Franklin, N. H., one of the prominent women yachtsmen of the locality opened "Harbor Lights," Stewart ave., early in June.

Mr. and Mrs. Seth K. Ames of Melrose Highlands are once again established at "Sunset Rock" cottage which they have made their summer home for some years.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Elwell and family of Arlington have returned to their Edgemoor road cottage for the summer.

MILADY GOES SHOPPING

Gloucester, Mass.

Dear Eloise,

The news I know you have been patiently been waiting for is here. The prodigal son has arrived safely at home. Charles Marsh is no Clark Gable I assure you, but he has that college boy manliness that has a winning way with everyone. I shall endeavor to describe him to you as accurately as I can. He is a few inches short of six feet tall, broad athletic shoulders, and medium brown hair. He has a nice homely face, the sort of homely face that inspires trust. He seems so steady and slow, but actually he is brilliant.

So much has been happening in the Marsh household since his arrival, I hardly know where to begin to tell you all about the good times I have had.

First of all, a party was given at Stage Coach Inn in honor of the return of the family's pride and joy (you know what a favorite an only son in a family is.) Dinner was splendid, consisting of Caviar Canape, Celery, Olives, Nuts, Clam Broth Bellevue, Lobster Newburg, Potatoes, Chiffonade, Salad, Fresh Vegetables, Ice Cream, Cake, and Coffee. Dinner and conversation were progressing smoothly, then Mrs. Marsh, who by the way is over her siege of poison ivy, jumped up quickly and accidentally knocked over a tray of consommé a waiter was carrying to a nearby table. (Honestly, Eloise, I never could figure how one woman could get into so much trouble.) Charles with his usual debonair manner straightened things out to the convenience of all concerned, and then someone suggested dancing. The older folks were safely installed in the Marsh home for the continuance of the evening and the younger folks prepared to "trip the light fantastic" at the nearby "Le Rendezvous." Eloise, it is a darling open air dance hall with perfect lighting effects and so cool that it was just the place to add the finishing touch to the party.

Business first always makes pleasure after more enjoyable and so for a few days I settled down to my duties as private secretary, but found it rather difficult with Charles presenting his irresistible invitations to me. With no slight deliberation, we argued pro and con my career and his pleasure. We finally ended in an amusing agreement. It was decided that he would help me with my shopping and replying to letters, telegrams; and in return for his generosity, I was to play golf with him when our duties were completed, and so we set about on our tour of inspection of the Gloucester stores.

Of course the first thing to be considered was some sort of a snappy golf outfit, and the most natural place to go for perfect satisfaction was Mimi's. A blessing to me, they specialize in small sizes, and all I had to do was explain what I wanted and there it was—a nifty, navy blue, embroidered lawn dress with red accessories, just suited to playing golf.

Charles, not being a connoisseur of women's wearing apparel, decided to wait for me in the car, but I had a more brilliant idea, and suggested that he go to the Cooperative Bank to pay the second payment on his father's loan.

One of Charles' plans for the summer is a cocktail party for his college friends who are coming this weekend. Bearing this in mind, I recalled an exquisitely colorful cocktail set I had been at L. E. Andrews last week. It was a set of ten cocktail glasses each of a different hue. They were set on a green tray. In hopes that it would still be available, Charles and I went to see if it would meet with his approval. He was delighted with it and remarked favorably on my selection (you can imagine how this pleased me).

Thinking of my own necessities, I spotted a waste-paper basket that would be an attraction rather than a detraction to any room. It fit in perfectly with the color scheme of my boudoir. It was a deep rose in color, and ornated with a lovely old-fashioned girl.

Charles was weighed down with bundles and carried them safely to the car. He then questioned me as to where our next stop would be, and looking at the list Mr. Marsh had given me, I found the next place to go was the Gloucester Gas and Electric companies. There we were to buy a stove for the newlyweds. Taking into consideration the color scheme of the kitchen, we chose a cream-colored gas range. It has all the necessary equipment for an inexperienced housewife.

After being assured that the stove would be properly delivered, we went to the banks, I to the Gloucester National Bank, and Charles to the Cape Ann National Bank, where we attended to our financial interests.

Charles was getting weary of all this dashing around, but I had only a few more things to do, and I wanted to get them finished up.

Provisions must be kept up to par for our expected guests, and I knew Charles would know more of the likes and dislikes than I, so we proceeded to the first National Store. Charles was doing very nicely with his selections, but I chanced to mention that the guests might like to be treated to some of Gloucester's noted seafood. So we added to our purchases several cans of Gorton's Flaked Fish.

The last place I had to go was the Cape Pond Ice Company. The cook has been practically demanding a new refrigerator, as ours is in such a deplorable condition, and knowing the convenience of Joan's Coolerator, Mr. Marsh decided we could not be without one any longer.

Mrs. Marsh is going to New York in a few days and her husband is going to entrust to her care a group of documents concerning our connections with Hornblower and Weeks.

Oh, Eloise, this week has been one round of parties and corking good times. It is glorious to be working with a family that treats you as one of its own rather than considering you a menial.

Charles' guests have arrived and he has asked me to entertain them while he dresses, so please excuse me.

Affectionately,

C. ANNE SHORE.

* TO BE WON IN THE MID-WEST

if indeed the name dies not survive election day. And there are a whole lot of them.

The first to break away from this sole association will be the independent farmers of the Middle West who since its birth have been predominantly with the Republican party and have little in common with the different race stratas of the Eastern cities.

If these mid-westerners are convinced that its own flesh and blood, Landon and Knox, can handle the economic situation which has developed as intelligently and efficiently as the present Democratic setup—is a swing back to the re-born dirt-farmer, Abraham Lincoln-minded and controlled Republican party on the cards? If so convinced the Republican party has a good fighting chance of regaining control. And it is just on this issue—if such it may be termed—that the fight for either side is to be won or lost—a 1936 political winning of the West—just now it looks like 50-50.

Tonight, July 25—Gallup Institute gives Landon 16 majority in electoral college. Farm Journal indicates Landon in the lead—West test balloting Sept. 1. All predict close contest.

OUTER CAPE ANN

Never has the North Shore bloomed as beautifully as this season. With copious rains followed by a shower almost every night the ideal conditions for the growth of lush vegetation have not been equalled within memory. Especially has this condition favored the gardens and the growth of banked ramblers which, festooning wall and ledges make an especially attractive setting. The trees never seemed more hardy, vernal or vigorous. This, while the rest of the country was sweltering and the vegetation of all kinds withering in the sun. All in all the North Shore climatically from June 1 to January 1 may not be equalled, all things considered, along the entire Atlantic seaboard.

The Magnolia Beach Club is fairly bustling with activities this season, and men, women and children are equally entertained. Saturday noon the Club was a scene of gaiety with about forty members luncheoning on the beach and veranda, while music completed the joyous tumult. The afternoon was ended amid a frolic of invigorating water sports.

The children this season are having their fun too. Every youngster is extremely excited over the coming ten-mile swimming challenge, and all are in constant practice so he maybe acclaimed the "champ." So many laps a day will be covered until the entire distance is completed.

Entertaining at the Beach Club this week are: Mrs. John Zinnsner, party of twelve; Miss Pat Trenor, party of three; Mrs. O. W. Richardson, party of five; and Mr. and Mrs. William Rueter, party of four.

In our initial issue it was stated that Mr. C. McG. Smith a long-time and esteemed summer resident had passed on to the better land. This proves to be like the case of Mark Twain greatly exaggerated. Mr. Smith, all will be gratified to learn, is still with us and (DV) we hope will be with us many years. What better land than Magnolia.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Shaw of Newton have taken the William J. Barry house on Shore road, Magnolia.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kerrigan of Stoneham have leased "Villa Mare" on Shore road.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Hayward of Wayne, Penn., have the Curtis "Mar-ratt" house on the westerly side of Summer street at Manchester Cove.

"L'Abri" has again been opened by Mrs. J. A. Toutain and her daughters Jeanne and Marie Madeleine of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Walker and family of Malden have joined the summer colony to spend another season.

"Breezy Gables" has been opened by Mrs. Harry J. West of Auburndale.

Dr. and Mrs. Roy Wheeler and family of Cambridge are occupying their home "Eight Gables" for the season.

Miss Henrietta Wiest from York, Pa. is summering at the "Garden House."

Spending another season with us are Mr. and Mrs. James Willing and daughter Frances B. of Waban.

Mr. and Mrs. James B. Willing and small daughter Patricia, are spending the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Francis Smith.

"Serok" is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wingate and daughters Mabel and Oriana of Winchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Heebner of Boston, whose home is "Sea-Winds," Norwood avenue, recently celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at their home on the Headlands. Their daughter, Mrs. William L. Axt of Montclair, N. J., is with them for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren R. Rowell of Somerville have taken the house in King street for the season which they occupied last summer.

B. A. Pullman and family of Newton have taken a cottage on the Headlands, Norwood avenue, for the season.

The Bartlett cottage, Old Garden road, is this season's home of Dr. Edward J. O'Brien and family of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Gay Thayer of Worcester are occupying an apartment in Main street for the season.

Arthur B. Elson and his mother, Mrs. Louis C. Elson of Boston, have come to their home in Shetland road for the long stay. Mrs. Elson was the wife of Prof. Louis C. Elson nationally known in musical circles. The Elsons were for years summer residents at Bass Rocks.

RIVERVIEW

"Wam-Bega-Neesh" cottage is once again occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Benson and daughter Betty of Somerville.

Arriving at their cottage for another summer are Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Oliver Jr. and son Emerson, of Everett, and Mr. and Mrs. William Babson and daughter Jewel of Manchester, Conn.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Gorton of Gloucester and Mrs. Virginia King are now making Riverview their year around home.

SANDY BAY 18-FOOTERS

ROCKPORT, July 18—The Sandy Bay Yacht Club today sailed its regular championship race along with a challenger team race between the Sandy Bay fleet of the Massachusetts Bay 18-footers and the Boston Bay fleet.

Shirley Brooks' Sally from Boston Bay took the honor position at the finish after fighting it out with Laura Cooney's Onward II on the first time around the triangle inside the outer breakwater. Hosea White's Oriental, another Boston Bay boat, finished second after rounding the first time in third place.

The Boston Bay fleet had an advantage of one point over the Sandy Bay fleet, although it had only three boats against four from the home port.

On the first time around the triangle the race was among Sally, Oriental and Onward II, with the latter rounding the windward mark in first place. However, Sally and Oriental overtook the leader on the run down to the buoy off the inner breakwater, and on the second time around Sally worked out a nice lead over Oriental while the Water Baby, a Sandy Bay boat, finished third and Onward dropped back into fifth place.

The International Star Class ran off the first race of the championship for the Cape Ann district, Sandy Bay and Eastern Point fleets. The Sans Souci, sailed by Jerry Clark, and which was runner up in the Atlantic Coast Olympic trial on Great South Bay, Long Island, two weeks ago, captured today's race. Gifford Beal's Maide IV was second after fighting it out with the Star of India from Eastern Point.

Lindley Dean's Myrtice was the victor in the Sandy Bay 15-footers,

POPINJAY TOPS MOJALA

IN EASTERN POINT RACE

GLOUCESTER, July 18—Four classes made up the fleet racing at Eastern Point this afternoon, an eight-knot fickle southeast breeze coming favoring the craft off the water.

Mojala in the R's got off to fine advantage, turning the first reach at Kettle Island 30 seconds to the good, but Popinjay made off in the bay and romped away from her rival. In the Triangles it was single file formation from the start. Injun always leading with Scalene a consistent runner-up. Tid IV in the Sonders turned in another win.

The Knockabouts sailed the inside course with Clipper chalking up another first. The summary:

SANDY BAY WINS

ROCKPORT, July 19—The second race of two challenge races in the Boston Bay-Sandy Bay series in the Massachusetts Bay 18-foot class was sailed here this morning from the Sandy Bay Y. C. with the Sandy Bay boats taking first and third places after trailing yesterday. The race started out in a trifling match which brought Laura Cooney's Onward II into the lead at the start to be headed later by the Boston Bay boats and trail most of the way round the course when come up at the finish to win by 10 seconds over Shirley Brooks' Sally, yesterday's winner.

In the afternoon encounter of the regular championship race, George Roberts' Lee came home the victor in the Massachusetts Bay 18-footers. The Sans Souci with Jerry Clark at the helm came home the winner again with Elizabeth Ogilby's Star of India in second place to tie for second in the Star Class championship of Cape Ann.

MOJALA BEATS POPINJAY

IN EASTERN POINT RACE

GLOUCESTER, July 19—The most satisfactory race thus far this season was sailed at Eastern Point this afternoon in a fairly true and steady, though light breeze.

The hottest contest of the Summer was in the R's. Mojala getting away to a slight advantage with Popinjay overlapping throughout. Try all the tricks he could out of his old ditty bag, Skipper Cox could not edge inside the Mojala, turning on the first leg at Kettle Island with one second's difference.

On the wind to the Whistler it was tack and tack but Cox could not wrangle the weather berth from his antagonist. At this turn a second between the dualists also intervened. On the broad reach home Mojala stretched the margin to six seconds.

A similar close tussle occurred in the first five to finish in the Triangle Class, less than a minute covering these at the finish gun. Cursor was off to a good start and first at the Kettle Island turning with Spray and Injun right at hand. Rounding on the wind these three were kept to starboard inshore, while Idol and Scalene and the rest stood off in the bay getting an offshore slant.

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

Attention is called to the following provisions of an ordinance governing Gloucester Harbor. Sec. 44(a).

POWER BOATS — MUFLERS

(a) Power driven boats shall not exceed a speed of ten (10) miles per hour in the inner harbor, and for the purposes of determining what is the inner harbor, same shall comprise all the waters of Gloucester harbor lying northeasterly of an imaginary line extending from the spindle standing southwesterly of the Tarr & Wonsen copper paint factory directly across to the Fort Wharf, or by whatever name said wharf may be called.

(b) Boats with internal combustion engines shall be provided and equipped with a muffler or underwater exhaust of a type or types approved by and used in conformity with the rules and regulations authorized by the Commissioner of Public Safety, so that the noise of the same shall not cause unreasonable annoyance to persons in the vicinity of said boats.

LOBSTER POTS PROHIBITED

(c) Lobster or fish pots and similar contrivances attached to the surface with a rope and buoy floating on the surface, shall not be set, established, or maintained in the channel of Annisquam River, nor in the channels of the principal arms thereof, nor in the regularly used fairways in Gloucester harbor and waters adjacent thereto, nor within the courses laid out for races maintained by the Eastern Point Yacht Club and the Annisquam Yacht Club, nor anywhere else so as to unreasonably restrict the free use and navigation of said waters, unless a permit in writing is issued by the State Department of Public Works.

Any violation of this section shall be punished by a fine of Twenty Dollars ($20) for each offence.

ALLEN F. GRANT, Clerk,
A true copy. Attest:
ALLEN F. GRANT, City Clerk.

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

In the year nineteen hundred and thirty-two,

AN ORDINANCE

providing for certain ISOLATED "STOP" signs.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

SECTION 1—Every driver of a vehicle, bus or other conveyance, approaching an intersecting way at which there exists facing him, an official sign, authorized by this Municipal Council, said sign having apart from this regulation, the written approval of the Department of Public Works of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and bearing the word "STOP" shall before entering and proceeding through the intersection, bring such vehicle, bus or other conveyance to a complete STOP at such line as may be clearly marked, or, if there is no line so marked, at a place between the said sign and the line of the street intersection.

In the case of a line of two or more vehicles approaching such "STOP" sign, the drivers of the second and third vehicles in any group shall not be required to stop more than once at said designated line or place or in the immediate vicinity.

This ordinance shall not apply when the traffic is otherwise directed by a police officer or by another lawful traffic regulating sign, signal or device.

SECTION 2—In accordance with the foregoing, the Municipal Council hereby authorize the erection and maintenance of an official "STOP" sign or "stop" signs as to face:

1—North and southbound drivers on Magnolia avenue at Western avenue.

2—Northbound drivers on Centennial avenue at Washington street.

3—Southbound drivers on Centennial avenue at Western avenue.

4—Southbound drivers on Prospect street at Main street.

SECTION 3—Any persons found guilty of violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be guilty of misdemeanor and may be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars ($20.00) for each offence.

SECTION 4—All acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 5—This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after the expiration of ten (10) days from the date of its final passage.

In Municipal Council, April 1, 1932.

Passed first and second readings and to be enrolled.

ALLEN F. GRANT, City Clerk
In Municipal Council, April 1, 1932, Passed to be ordained.

GLOUCESTER, MASS.

Founded in 1849

The accurate historical painting from which this picture was made was painted by Alexander Garfield Tupper, Gloucester's artist-poet and is correct in every detail. It represents the landing in 1623 of the Dorchester colonists at Half-Moon beach, Fisherman's Field — now Stage Fort park — where was founded the Massachusetts Bay Colony. It would have been well had this competent artist been commissioned by the government to make a mural representing this outstanding occasion in the nation's history for the new Federal building. See poem in last issue and "Dogtown Common" current number.

POINTS OF INTEREST

Gloucester, Cape Ann — First white man to visit its shores was Thorwald in 1004. Harbor called by Norsemen "Krossanes." Gosnold landed here in 1602 and found the place had been used as a base by Portuguese fishermen. In 1605 Champlain sailed by the Cape but did not land. The next year, September 1606, he entered the harbor which he named Le Beauport and made a map of it. Attacked by 200 Indians and sailed away the next day. In 1614 Capt. John Smith named it Cape Ann after Anne of Denmark, mother of King Charles I. First permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder. Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern Point. Dog Bar breakwater extends from a half mile long, completed in 1904 and extends from this point. At Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ram-

parts" occupies site of Fort Independence.

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the Cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenswood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from Fresh Water Cove or the so-called Old Salem road, Western avenue. Mason Walton's cabin, "Hermit of Bond's Hill," on this road. Well worth frequenting.

Beacon or Governor's Hill, near center of city, from Washington street. Small reservation at top from which a fine view may be obtained.

Dogtown Commons, site of deserted Revolutionary settlement. Reached from Gee avenue, Riverdale. Fine example of boulder deposits of glacial period. "Whale's Jaw," best known of these boulders, at edge of common. Rocking stone, etc., now taken over by the city as a water shed.

Wharves skirting the water front, interesting as affording "close-up" of fish curing, etc.

Babson House, opposite Ellery House, erected by Col. John Low about 1745. Old slave pens in attic.

Main street, first known as Fore, afterwards as Front street. Principal business avenue. Laid out 1642. Middle street, paralleling Main, contains many old colonial houses and the Judith Sargent house, the grounds of which, originally extending to Main street have been restored.

On Middle street are the First Parish (Unitarian) Church, oldest in Gloucester; Independent Christian (Universalist) first church edifice erected 1805; St. John's Episcopal Church. Trinity Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Sawyer Free Library and Reading Room. Middle street, adjoining Unitarian church. Interior fine specimen of colonial woodwork. Originally home of Thomas Sanders, merchant.

Old Town Hall Square, at junction of Middle and Washington streets. Beautiful American Legion Memorial building and monument on which was placed statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughn Hyatt.

Fort Point, at western side of inner harbor, down Commercial street from Main, fortified in 1743. Now Italian quarter and rendezvous of fishermen of that nationality.

Drives around the Cape: Up Washington street, through Riverdale, past Annisquam, Bay View, Lanesville into Pigeon Cove, Rockport and completing the circuit to Gloucester. Almost a continuous ocean view, which was completed when the Bass Rocks-Land's End stretch was completed.

Beaches: Little Good Harbor and Long Beaches, between Bass Rocks and Land's End, Rockport. Wingaersheek Beach, West Gloucester, largest on Cape, two miles long, 600 feet deep at low tide; reached from Essex avenue, West Gloucester, down Concord street.

Quarries at Bay View and Pigeon Cove, among largest in country, near main highway.

Blynman canal, first cut in 1642 by Rev. Richard Blynman, at Western entrance of city.

Drives: "Little Heater," "Dark Hole" at West Gloucester.

Old Salem road, first highway from the town, blazed out in 1623, when part of the settlers went to Salem. Down Hesperus avenue (discontinued in 1892) to Salem. Name erroneously applied to Old Pest House road, leading through Ravenswood park from Western ave.

Who knows not fear is master of his fate,
All that Life has to offer may be his.
So that he is but swift to act,
Not prone to hesitate,
Not swayed by doubts that shackle weaker men,
All his desires may see fulfillment.

RUSSIA

Some ten years ago The SHORE printed an editorial regarding the revolution in Russia which—the Revolution has turned out to be the outstanding and epoch making event of the Great War.

At the time there was much criticism regarding the communistic form of government and its regimentation of industry, its abolishing of all religious forms, its easy marriage customs, etc. But Lenin planned wisely more or less. The problem: Two hundred million illiterate Russians steeped in ignorance since time began. What folly to place the reins of government in their hands? What chaos would have resulted?

So he decreed, first, education for all, regimentation and the discipline of industry. In less than fifteen years the transformation has been one of the most remarkable since time began. Where before myriads of dumb-driven mouziks there is now an educated generation of up-to-date youth—men and women—which is gradually toning down the necessary crudities that attended the beginnings of the economic revolution.

Teaching communism to other nations especially America? What need of that when our colleges and schools are sending out their hundreds of thousands of half-baked native communists some of the most radical, by an irony of chance, occupying the seats of the mighty with as much arbitrary power as even Lenin or Trotzky dreamed. Breaking down the marriage ties? Forsooth! With our divorce courts working overtime in the states and Reno speeding up, with the average marriage lasting four years, with the tales of the divorce courts relating sordid stories of domestic infelicities—well we'd best first remove that Russian mite from our own native optic. Communism? Can you beat the enforced share the wealth setup on this side.

And this transformation it has turned out has been a blessing to western civilization. Without it we may inevitably have been submerged. The Japanese Genghis Khans lying idly by during the World war and profiting by its lessons have again begun the trek westward having for its openly and avowed object the subjection of the West by the East. They got to Vienna the last time; before the era of the iron horse, or motorized car.

England which has been the great bulwark has her back against the wall fighting for very existence. What is to stop Japan? From America?

The Russian army and the Russian army alone. During the past fifteen years the Russians foreseeing the inevitable have quietly prepared for the conflict. With vast undeveloped resources of material she has invited American and foreign engineers to teach her people the methods of modern mechanism. She has trained three million soldiers. She has twenty more million in reserve. She has the largest fleet of war aircraft in the world. Even her women are skilled aviatrix. Parachute jumping, male and female has been developed as no other nation has attempted.

Before this defense massed in the Siberian-Chinese border the Japanese have been paused. They still thunder their war threats from Tokio but the stolid Russians are meeting them toe to toe on their frontier and stopping them.

And by taking the myriads of Chinese in hand, training them by modern methods she may eventually drive back the mighty Japanese from the stronghold in China which she has overrun.

Britain has all she can do to hold in leash the East Indians, Egyptians, Arabs who constitute the southern Wing of the Oriental invasion. So in the modern development of Russia comes the salvation of western civilization. In what way does it affect the United States? Already Japan is in negotiation with a South American Pacific power which has for its object the cession of the Galapagos islands to Japan in return for an offensive alliance whereby Japan engages to come to the assistance of the South American power in question. The Galapagos islands as a naval base in striking distance of Panama and the acquisition of much of the Pacific coast?

And why not? We have a hands off Munroe doctrine, yet go into the East Indian seas and take the Phillipines and other islands? Why may not Japan with equal consistency take a similar stand as regards the Asiatic Pacific? That, openly announced, is her goal of determination.

The only nation that stands in the way, by land at least, is Russia. Britain today is teamed up with her for the very reason. How times change. In the greater part of the 19th century the Russian bear was the great British bugaboo. Remember Kipling's warning—"over and over again—we must make no truce with Adam Zad; the bear that walks like a man? Eheu Fugate! The Lion and the Bear lined up together facing a common enemy. And be it remembered they are fighting a battle at the same time. So let's Russia alone and mind our own business.

Addenda—A week after this was written come the news that the Russian dictatorship has decreed the establishment of a dual-chambered parliament. Eventually the same as the United States.

ENTERTAINED AT PERCE, P.

A party of Gloucester ladies doing the Gaspé trip were entertained recently at the summer home of Senator and Madame D. O. L'Esperance and daughter Miss Rebecca Pelletier. While Perce Miss Alice P. Friend, one of the group, had the opportunity of presenting a letter of introduction from her brother, Mayor Weston U. Friend, the Senator who is a member of the Dominion Parliament from Quebec. It is one of the pleasant recollections of the trip.

LOCAL BOYS MAKE GOOD

THE Shore is always pleased to note the success of the local boys who have gone out in the world and made it up and take notice. We clip the following from the last issue of the Sunday Globe:

Frederick Ayer and H. Philip Minis, a new producing firm, announce that they have secured the American rights of "Distinguished Gathering," a current London hit.

Chamberlain Brown is evidently an optimist of high degree. He confidently announces

HOMEWARD BOUND

The author of this, James Davis, was judge of the Gloucester Police Court for nearly 60 years. He was a shipcarpenter at Annisquam coming to the city proper in the early 60's engaging in a retail business and being appointed a trial justice. He was a frequent contributor of poetry on local topics to the press of which the following must be added to the town's anthology. He lived during the period of the terrific losses of life and fishing vessels—reflected in the selection given below.

"We'll moor our old bark, boys, in port side by side,
And greet our dear friends on the heavenly shore."

O heave up the anchor, the waist
it lies low

With the weight of our good finny freight in the hold;

The wind from the east is beginning to blow,

Now heave up the anchor, my live lions bold;

My eyes they are aching for sight of the land,

My heart it is sighing for sweet home once more:

Now heave O, my hearties, and landward we'll stand,

To meet the dear friends who are waiting on shore.

CHORUS

O heave up the anchor, my good fishers bold,

And homeward we'll steer with our freight good as gold;

Blow, breezes, and waft us the wide waters o'er,

For dear ones are waiting for us
on the shore.

Out on the dark waters for four weeks and more,

We've trawled and we've hauled,
boys, day in and day out;

Now dear ones are watching for us on the shore,

And fears for our safety are whispered about;

So heave up the anchor and set every sail,

Blow, breezes, and speed us the
wide waters o'er,

Blow steady and strong till the home port we hail,

And gladden the hearts that are waiting on shore.—Chorus.

O, Love will sail out, and Love will sail in,

For beneath our rough jackets
our hearts beat warm,

And bread and delights for our
dear ones to win,

We watch, and we work, and we battle the storm;

But happy the day when the skipper doth say,

"Come, heave up the anchor men, full is our store,"

And o'er the wide waters we speed on our way,

To meet the dear friends who are waiting on shore.—Chorus.

And so we will sail, boys, blow
high or blow low,

Sail landward or seaward, as duty may call,

With a heart for hard fortunes,
for never we know,

Bound outward or inward, what luck may befall;

And we sail and we ride out on Georges' far bank,

While the winds and the waters
they rage and they roar,

And between us and death there is only a plank,

For the sake of the dear ones
we've left on the shore.

—Chorus.

There's danger on land, and there's danger at sea,

But there's hope at all partings of meeting again,

For love is around us wherever we be,

And One there goes with us who knows we are men;

So we sail and we ride out upon the rough tide,

Expecting that when our last sea voyage is o'er,

We'll moor our old barks, boys, in
port side by side,

And greet our dear friends on the heavenly shore.—Chorus.

Art and Dramatic

JOHN ALFRED COOK

It is with regret that we append notice of the death of John A.
Cook, one of the best known artists of his day—kindly, helpful an artist who never lowered high standards to the cellar of "modernism."

John Alfred Cook was born in the city, March 14, 1870, son of Edward and Hannah Frances (McKney) Cook. He was a lifelong resident here, except during schooling and painting trips.
He was educated in the public schools here and at the Cowles school in Boston.

He became interested in painting as a young man. After studying for some years, he took a studio on Eastern Point in 1901, which he occupied until the Eastern Point Yacht Club was formed several years ago. For the past six years he had maintained a summer studio in the Reed building, adjacent to the North Shore Arts Association galleries. His home was at 10 Highland street, and he had a barn-studio at the rear of 16 Sayward street, that was his pride and the wonder and cause of admiration of artist friends. In it are many of his pictures and his unusual collection of skeletons of birds and animals. He was considerable of a naturalist. He was noted for his paintings of animals.

He formerly was a breeder and exhibitor of fancy fowl. He liked to accumulate ancient nautical instruments, weapons and armor.

Helped Many Good Causes

Mr. Cook was quiet, unassuming and generous. He helped along many a good cause and took an active part in such diverse activities as those of the Cape Ann Camera Club and the artists' carnivals at Rocky Neck. He was the producer of the freak show at the carnivals in 1933 and 1934, designing costumes and arranging stunts that made the exhibit amusing to the public, as well as profitable to the North Shore Arts Association. He was an interesting conversationalist, despite deafness that made it difficult for him to hear.

His pictures are conservative and realistic, rather than modern or impressionistic. He painted what he saw, reserving of course the artist's right to exclude unwanted details. Most of his pictures are watercolors, many of them of Gloucester harbor scenes.
They have been in steady demand through the years, and sold while others, more pretentious, painters were resorting to government art projects. Highly decorative and thus prized for homes, they were also regarded with respect by fellow artists for their artistic merit.
He had worked in oil, too, and went sketching in Vermont and other sections, but he was much interested in preserving the color of a Gloucester that is vanishing.

Works Widely Exhibited

He exhibited his work in many of the country's important galleries. Some of his affiliations were with the three Cape Ann associations, the North Shore Arts Association, in which he was a charter member and an active worker, the Gloucester Society of Artists and the Rockport Art Association, the Boston Art Club, the New Haven Paint and Clay Club,
the Baltimore Watercolor Club,
the Society of Independent Artists,

the American Artists Professional League, and the Cape Ann Camera Club.

He gave a watercolor painting to the Addison Gilbert Hospital in 1933 that hangs in the waiting room. There are many other examples of his work in Gloucester homes and buildings.

AUTUMN IDYLL

The gates of Paradise ajar,
Rare tints flung o'er the world.
A sheen of silver wings afar,
Red banners, are unfurled.

On shining heights, soft shadows play

A radiant flaming tree,
And joyous dancing sun-beams
stray,

Where white cliffs meet the sea.

A gypsy trail, of golden leaves
Alluring zephyrs blow,
The glory of pale amber-sheaves,
Then—twilight, and star-glow.

RAFE'S CHASM --- NORMAN'S WOE BLUFF SAVED TO THE PUBLIC

State Reservations Committee Will Take Over The Property For Perpetual Preservation --- Gloucester's Greatest Natural Advertising Asset

THE COUNTRY'S MOST FAMOUS REEF — NORMAN'S WOE ROCK — REPUTED SCENE OF "THE WRECK OF THE HESPERUS"

MORE AND MORE the value of historic spots as a commercial asset is being realized. Prior to some 25 years ago but little attention was paid to this matter and many places of historic note or interest have been removed or destroyed that had distinct value sentimentally and historically.

However since the big 250th and Tercentenary celebrations the general public have become more conscious of the commercial possibilities of these places and objects.

If one were asked to name the person or persons whose writings or productions have done the most to spread the fame of the city to an extent to attract tourists here from all sections perhaps Longfellow would poll the greatest number of votes. Who has not read the pathetic ballad of the "Wreck of the Hesperus" of the bluff self-confident skipper who disdained the advice of his old mate to put into "yonder port for I fear a hurricane" and the sad fate of the craft and all hands including the little daughter. Founded on fact, it is one of those immortal pieces embalmed in the amber of poetry which will never die. So

Longfellow stands as number one man as regards the most valuable literary contributor to the city's interest.

Then perhaps might follow Kipling with his "Captains Courageous" now in the film and sound works for production in the cinemas—undoubtedly bound for circulation all over the world in every metropolis and hamlet where English is spoken with Freddie Bartholomew as one of its principals. Advertising of such tremendous value as to be beyond computation—absolutely free of all price.

So when about 15 years ago the high bluff at Magnolia in which is that wonder of nature Rafe's chasm looking right down on that odd shaped bit of rock reef—fashioned like the fish the children call the horsehoe—was sold by the original owners who had always allowed free access to the place the Municipal Council sat up, took notice and action.

Open to Foot Passengers

It entered into negotiation with the new owner whereby an agreement was come into that the place was always to remain open, access being restricted to foot passengers. This has been in effect until recently the Council had been notified that the property had been passed into possession of another company which holds that the agreement entered into with the city and the former owner is void and not binding.

However some public spirited citizens getting wind of the situation took the initiative of entering into the matter the result being that it was brought to the attention of the Commission on Public Reservations to whom has been entrusted the care and administration of tracts given for public use and preservation.

Meetings of representatives of the property, the Municipal Council and the Reservations committee have been held here and it is understood that all concerned are agreeable to have the tract come under the control of the Reservations board as a part of the public domain. Already Anne, as it is now known or formerly Thompson's mountain, so named from a Colonial minister of the West Gloucester parish has been given over to the trusteeship of this commission the Minot brothers as a memorial

Midsummer—and the high noon of the season has been struck. Comes August, the high tide month of the summer season. Today the places by the shore where the jolly yachtsmen foregather with jocund laugh, are silent. All hands and youthful skippers have gone to Marblehead to joust in the annual yachting tourney held off that historic old seaport — whose maritime glories are in the past.

Edward M. Williams, summer resident at The Ramparts, Eastern Point, and an executive of the Sherwin-Williams company, nationally known paint manufacturers, died Saturday at his home 10916 Magnolia drive, Cleveland, following a prolonged illness. He was 65. Mr. Williams spent most of the early summer here and returned to Cleveland a week ago.

He was born in Cleveland and was educated at Yale, graduating with the class of 1893. He married Mary, daughter of Mrs. S. A. Raymond of Cleveland and The Rampart, Eastern Point. She survives with a son, Edmund P., three daughters, Mrs. Andrew Thomas of Dayton, O.; Misses Madeleine and Molly Williams of Cleveland.

Funeral services were held at Cleveland.

The Garden Club Exhibit

THE annual exhibition of the Cape Ann Garden Club, the membership comprised of women of the summer colony, was held Thursday at the Gallery on the Moors—that institution original home of the private theatre and art gallery in New England founded by the late Mr. and Mrs. William E. Atwood which happily remains as their memorial. And what more fitting memorial as exemplified in its use for an exhibit of the choicest of flowers and foliage in which Cape Ann abounds. Numbers from all over Greater Cape Ann came to view its profusion of blooms, greenery and loveliness.

The sponsors included Miss Ellen B. Laight, class 1; Mrs. William D. Elwell, class 2; Mrs. Philip P. Cole, class 3; Mrs. Winthrop Sargent, Jr., class 4; Mrs. Coburn Smith, class 5; Mrs. Edward Wilson, class 6; Miss Margaret Fitzhugh Browne, class 7; Miss Georgiana Dodge, class 8; Mrs. Sherman Holcomb, class 9; Mrs. James F.

EAST GLOUCESTER

Last Sunday evening, July 26, Miss Elizabeth Jane Taylor of Philadelphia gave a delightful vocal recital at the Hawthorne Inn. The artiste has a lovely coloratura soprano voice. She gave a repeat performance on Thursday, July 30, in response to popular demand.

On July 31, Friday evening, the Inn will witness an exhibition of Interpretive Dancing presented by Edmund Bradley from the Boston School of Ballet.

Tuesday, July 21, there was a card party at the Inn consisting of ten tables. The first prize was won by Miss Violet Gratz of Philadelphia, and the second by Mrs. D'Oyley of Mississippi. Mrs. H. Marcus Dennison of Baltimore won the Mah Jong prize, while Miss Florence Basshor of Baltimore won the door prize.

Sixteen tables were in play at the bridge party of the Society of Artists held last evening in its gallery. Mrs. Elizabeth Barnett won the first door prize, an etching by John J. Barry, as well as a table prize. Mrs. M. S. Cline-dinst won second door prize, a reproduction of the Fisherman at the Wheel statue. Miss Alice Ernst and Gayton Whitmore were in charge of the play.

BASS ROCKS

WE received a pleasant call the other day from an old friend Silas Hibbard Ayer—one of the exiles of the Bass Rocks colony. Dr. Ayer, a young man, is keenly interested in all that is going on in the world.

He is staying at the seaside resort, the old corner of Beach and Atlantic roads where he may be contacted daily.

His reminiscences of the early days at Bass Rocks are interesting. Does anyone know off hand where the tennis was played on Cape Ann? It was at Bass Rocks and these were the circumstances. The game had been introduced into this country by a naturally the progressive young members of the Bass Rocks summer colony, ambitious to be up to the minute in things in ultra sporting, decided to take up the game. So they wrote Wright & Ditson—this was way in the late seventies—and found a complete tennis outfit, net, rackets, balls, etc., was listed at $25.

This was quite a sum in those days, quite beyond the combined financial resources of the group. Not to mention they formed a committee of men and means and gave a concert of talent to raise the necessary funds. The concert was given in the known Judge Sherman cottage on top of the boulder by the sea, the results being $35. So the set was chased but the strange lingo of the game, love one, etc., as given in the book of instructions puzzled somewhat but they persisted to learn the technique. Their headquarters was near the site of the present Casino. So that's that.

Coming back to the doctor, who was an inventor of several handy articles and gadgets, we find that to be with the times he has taken the following for a slogan, a la Mae West:

Don't wait for a decline,
"Come up and see me sometime."

Verbum sap.

Monday, July 27, Mrs. Charles Wilson entertained a large group at a luncheon given at the Bass Rocks Golf Club.

Mrs. John Nash entertained a large group of friends at luncheon on Thursday, July 30.

ANNISQUAM

ONG those who have been at Annisquam this season is Ralph T. Hale, Boston publisher, the competent chairman for several years of the Annisquam Yacht racing committee. Mr. Hale left in the season on the "Volend" for a business trip in Europe, finally combining a little sight-seeing en route. After a tour of the islands and France, mainly in an air flight was made to England, landing at Croydon being in pouring rain. An exploration of noted spots in English history in London and all England is now on the program, after which he will embark for home and is to be once more on his native soil, especially 'Squam, early this fall. He arrived in the tight little boat at the eve of the excitement attending the attempted assault on the

Dear Eloise,

This week has been one of many disappointments. I have been left completely to myself for days.

First of all, Charles met Mrs. Carol Robbins at the Beach Club or somewhere, (I don't seem to remember exactly) and she has been using her charms to ensnare her victim. She is one of these mysterious, fascinating widows who just "slays" the men, and poor Charles is so captivated by her allure that he hardly eats or sleeps anymore. You know, Eloise, I believe I am slightly jealous, otherwise it shouldn't have been important enough to mention.

Mr. Marsh decided (at the last minute) to go to New York with Mrs. Marsh and they have been gone for a week. I think he wanted principally to confer with Hornblower and Weeks. Consequently, I have had a colossal amount of work to do.

Jerry Van Vorhees has gone off on a hunting trip with some of his friends to parts unknown. He has been gone several days and I have not had as much as a card from him. Eloise, I was beginning to wonder if I was becoming a bore or if something was lacking in my personality.

My dear, I feel somewhat better now that I have confided my trials and tribulations to you and shall endeavor to make the remainder of my letter a little more cheerful.

I have been very "kitchen-minded" this week, thanks to Maybelle. In my spare moments I go in to have a confidential chat with her. You would be surprised at the efficient manner in which I can now perform kitchen duties. I have learned the correct arrangement of food when placed in the Coolerator (the one we bought at the Cape Pond Ice Company last week), how to roast meats and how to fix canned vegetables so they taste as if they had just come out of a garden.

Now that I have become such an apt culinary expert, Maybelle thought I should be just as well informed about buying provisions. Consequently, Maybelle has appointed herself as my instructor and we visit the First National Store at various intervals to purchase the necessary supplies.

* * * *

Sorry for the interruption in the letter, but I had a phone call from the Cooperative Bank and had to dash off to attend to the conglomeration of figures concerning interests and principal (I had no idea what he was talking about).

I must tell you the bit of news while it is fresh in my mind. I went horseback riding the other day, and whom did I meet but Charles and Carol—and she was "purring" coily in his ear (sweet nothings; I suppose). That "green-eyed monster" has appeared again!

Now to get back to my domestic line of thought. Maybelle consented to let me prepare lunch alone. There is not time to tell you all that we had, but I do want to mention the delicacy from Gorton's-salad fish. Maybelle praised me highly on my adaptability as a cook.

Mr. Marsh had left the roadster for my convenience, so after lunch I drove over to town. I made a stop at the Gloucester National Bank and the Cape Ann National Bank.

Then I went to the Gas and Electric Company to pay the bills. While there I made some inquiries about an electric clock (I needed one badly for my room). I purchased a small but dependable boudoir clock.

I had received a telegram from the Marshs' telling me to go to L. E. Andrews to ask about plumbing and bathroom fixtures. You know the present plumbing has been installed here for a good many years. If left to my decision, it might not jibe with my employer's. Consequently, the plumbers decided to start the installation of the pipes, and then when Mr. Marsh comes home, he can choose the actual color for the fixtures. Personally, I would prefer coral and black, but he, being conservative, will probably choose white.

Knowing the congeniality of Mr. and Mrs. Wells, the proprietors of the Mimi Shop, I dropped in to have a chat with them. You know how it is when you get into a dress shop—you are bound to look around, and Mrs. Wells very obligingly showed me the latest creations. There was a stunning dark blue, two-piece linen outfit. The skirt was tailored and the top was made like a man's mess jacket with those new-fangled wooden buttons. Ever since I left the Mimi Shop, that dress has been foremost in my mind. I really can't afford to buy it this week, but I'm afraid if I wait it will be gone. So you see I am in a quandry.

Maybelle and I decided that it was unnecessary to cook dinner for two people. We drove over to the Stage Coach Inn and had a delightful dinner. I think Maybelle enjoyed her brief respite from her usual routine.

So long for the present, I have a horde of telegrams and letters to answer, and I am sure that it will take me the entire evening.

Until later,

wait a week. Jerry has just come home. He has explained to my entire satisfaction the reason for my not having heard from him. He claims that he was camping in the "wilds" where a postoffice was inaccessible. Tonight we have planned to go to the Rendez-Vous to dance. This will be the first bit of excitement I have had all week.

Hope to have more to tell you next week.

that he will send forth five touring companies next season, playing 12 bills weekly in leading Eastern cities.

We remember the youthful Chamberlain Brown some 25 years ago, then a summer resident at 'Squam. The theatrical instinct developed early for young Chamberlain rounded up the amateur talent of the colony and gave some very good vaudeville entertainments in the club house. Since that time the young impressario has gone far. Directing five companies on the road in leading Eastern cities is no cinch in these parlous times. He certainly has climbed high on the theatrical ladder.

As to young Ayer, grandson, we believe of Dr. Silas of Bass Rocks, he also is a big shot in the profession and is sponsoring both in London and the United States some high class productions. Going some too. The Ayer boys come by this thing naturally. One while at Bass Rocks—was it Nat?—composed a series of popular songs which went close into the hundreds of thousands, particularly "Oh You Beautiful Doll," of which Jerome Remick the Detroit publisher sold more than a million copies. By the way, the Remicks—of Detroit—were summer residents at Bass Rocks for a number of seasons, but have dropped out of the roster in recent years.

THE AUDACIOUS SATANELLOS

The Elks Festival at Stage Fort Park, has the distinction of presenting the world's most distinctive aerial thriller, "The Audacious Satanellos" comprising two beautiful young girls, the essence of charm and grace, and one athletic and virile young man.

High up on a gyrostatic revolving rigging, 60 feet in the air, these performers go through the most daring stunts ever conceived. Their apparatus in itself is a very unique one, consisting of a slender steel pole rising to a height of 60 feet, around which is more or less circular appearing bar, from which extends three trapeze riggings from which the artists perform.

This is indeed an unusual attraction that is well worth going out of your way to see. It is the absolute limit of fearless artistry. Don't fail to see the Audacious Satanellos at Stage Fort Park, on August 4, 5, 6, and 7 in the evening.

OUTER CAPE ANN

On July 29, Miss Polly Richardson entertained a party of two.

Mrs. Arthur M. Jones gave lunch for a party of three on Wednesday, July 29.

Miss Barbara Gage entertained a party of four at a delightful luncheon.

Mrs. O. W. Richardson entertained a party of six on the beach in a most novel manner.

Mrs. Charles Wadsworth gave a party for four people.

Miss Jeannette MacGregor held a luncheon for two at the Club.

On July 23, a Scavenger Hunt for the children was held. Among the participants were Ann Stevens, Jeannette MacGregor, Merrill Bunce, Margaret Essen acting as chauffeurs. Some of the objects to be found were: a worm, handcuffs, ginger ale bottle, and a rock, weighing one pound exactly. The prize winners were Pat Trenor and Charles Wadsworth. After the hunt was over, they enjoyed supper at the Coolidge bungalow. The hostesses of this party were Barbara Stevens and Mrs. Zinsser. Ellen, Tommy and John Zinsser, Peter and Stuart Douglas, Charles and Elizabeth Wadsworth, and Pat Trenor were the guests.

INJUN SETS OWN COURSE FOR EASTERN POINT WIN

GLOUCESTER, July 25—The Eastern Point yachting flotilla this afternoon sailed in a spanking southeasterly.

In the R Class it was just a sail for the Magnolia Popinjay which took command at the outset.

Athlon led the Triangle division at the start as Injun broke away from the rest, which had kept to the eastward, standing out in the bay alone.

Converging at the weather mark, it developed that the move had made money, the Injun having established a good two-minute lead which was maintained. The summary:

SANDY BAY WINNERS

ROCKPORT, July 25—A fine southeasterly breeze at the outset, veering a point or two and softening somewhat, were the conditions for the Sandy Bay Y. C. racing this afternoon.

In all the classes the winners established early leads.

The course was triangular, a close reach to Straitsmouth, a run across and a beat to the finish and repeat. The summary:

HONORS SPLIT AT 'SQUAM
ANNISQUAM, July 25 and 26—onors in the weekend yacht racing of the Annisquam fleet were plit up between Bobolink, Donald sher and Paul Woodbury's Flamingo in the bird class, while Wil-am B. Cole's Eel and the King-sh and Shark II were the fish cat winners, the latter pair in the blue and red divisions in the Sun-ay sailing. Heavy weather pre-ailed, a strong southwest breeze n Saturday and a heavy north-wester which kicked up consider-ble sea yesterday.

Saturday's was perhaps the most satisfactory race of the season.
Course was leeward and windward for the bird boats, to the outer mark and return, and to the inner mark and return for the fishes.
Robert Lufkin's Wren pulled away from the fleet on the run and turned the mark well ahead, Aloof and Bobolink, runners up. Skipper Lufkin kept to starboard well over toward Bay View. However, Capt. Usher and the board of strategy on Bobolink thought that conditions under Coffin's Beach promised better going and stood off on a long port board in that direction, followed by Oloof and later by Avis. The guess was the best one and they entered the home stretch with the race well in hand.

Tarpon and Eel

Tarpon and Eel were first and second to the turn in the fish class.
Tarpon headed in for Bay View and Dab followed Bobolink to the Essex shore and caught a slant which landed them in the money.
Yesterday it was rough and wet with the boats shipping a good deal of water. Conditions were just to the liking of Flamingo.
Course was a reach to Plum Cove,
a beat to Essex and a run home.
Flamingo stepped out from the start and was never in danger.
On the beat, Avis, sailed by Dr.
Fletcher Wonson of Worcester, home on a short vacation, moved into second place.

CLIFFS AT MAGNOLIA

Rose saffron cliffs
'Gainst an azure sky,
I would word-paint it Dare I try.

I'd hate to sketch
In mawkish vein
Inane patter like Drops of rain.

Still if translated Through sun-shot mist
At dewy dusk when Death has kissed.

I think I'll see
The ethereal glow
Of that once lovely Scene below.

Rose saffron cliffs
'Gainst an azure sky,
Flung through the haze
Where salt seas lie.

WRIGHT, SWEETSER IN TIE AT ROCKPORT

ROCKPORT, July 25—Fred J. Wright, Jr., Trapelo, former state champion, and Alan Sweetser, former North Shore resident, back on vacation from Dallas, Tex., shared medal honors by carding sub-par 73's to lead a field of 102 in the annual M. G. A. open medal tournament which ended today at the Rockport Golf Club.

Sweetser, a six-handicap man in his home state, played from scratch here and shot his round between showers Friday. Until Wright came in among the final group late this afternoon with his equalizer it was the outstanding card of the tourney.

Judge Joseph M. Monahan Sandy Burr, took Class A net with 75-70. Class B medal went to D. D. Ellis of Haverhill with 79 and there were three 69's for the net, Henry L. Marshall of the home club, Harold Smearage, Labor-in-Vain, and L. M. Young, Labor-in-Vain. In Class C, 17 to limit, there was another triple tie for gross between Rex Bradlee and John McDonald, Rockport, and Frank Lassen, Trapelo, all with 86's. For net Jacob Story, Labor-in-Vain, and A. G. Fitzgerald each had a 67.

Sweetser had a shaky start with two over par on the first three holes, but reached the turn on even terms with birdies on the fourth and eighth. On his second nine, he sank a long putt for a birdie three on the 10th, lost his advantage with a five on the 12th, but came in one under par with a second birdie four on the 454-yard 13th.

Like Sweetser, the ex-state champ had a bad start with a poor second shot at No. 1, which required a five, but his three on the third and par golf for the rest of the round brought him to the turn with a 36, one under par. On the nine, Wright got into trouble on the 12th, after birdies on the 10th and 11th, with a five on a par four hole. A birdie on the 13th and par on the next three gave him a chance to beat Sweetser's total, but he sliced his drive on the 17th and stubbed his approach shot to take a five. The leading cards:

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

In the year nineteen hundred and thirty-two,

AN ORDINANCE

providing for certain ISOLATED "STOP" signs.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

SECTION 1—Every driver of a vehicle, bus or other conveyance, approaching an intersecting way at which there exists facing him, an official sign, authorized by this Municipal Council, said sign having apart from this regulation, the written approval of the Department of Public Works of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and bearing the word "STOP" shall before entering and proceeding through the intersection, bring such vehicle, bus or other conveyance to a complete STOP at such line as may be clearly marked, or, if there is no line so marked, at a place between the said sign and the line of the street intersection.

In the case of a line of two or more vehicles approaching such "STOP" sign, the drivers of the second and third vehicles in any group shall not be required to stop more than once at said designated line or place or in the immediate vicinity.

This ordinance shall not apply when the traffic is otherwise directed by a police officer or by any other lawful traffic regulating signal or device.

SECTION 2—In accordance with the foregoing, the Municipal Council hereby authorize the erection and maintenance of an official "STOP" sign or "stop" signs as to face:

- 1—North and southbound drivers on Magnolia avenue at Western avenue.
- 2—Northbound drivers on Centennial avenue at Washington street.
- 3—Southbound drivers on Centennial avenue at Western avenue.
- 4—Southbound drivers on Prospect street at Main street.

SECTION 3—Any persons found guilty of violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars ($20.00) for each offence.

SECTION 4—All acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 5—This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after the expiration of (10) days from the date of final passage.

In Municipal Council, April 1932.

Passed first and second readings and to be enrolled.
ALLEN F. GRANT, City Clerk
In Municipal Council, April 1932, Passed to be ordained.

Fire Ward

Attention is called to the following provisions of an ordinance governing Gloucester Harbor. Sec. 44(a).

POWER BOATS — MUFFLERS

(a) Power driven boats shall not exceed a speed of ten (10) miles per hour in the inner harbor, and for the purposes of determining what is the inner harbor, same shall comprise all the waters of Gloucester harbor lying northeasterly of an imaginary line extending from the spindle standing southwesterly of the Tarr & Wonsen copper paint factory directly across to the Fort Wharf, or by whatever name said wharf may be called.

(b) Boats with internal combustion engines shall be provided and equipped with a muffler or underwater exhaust of a type or types approved by and used in conformity with the rules and regulations authorized by the Commissioner of Public Safety, so that the noise of the same shall not cause unreasonable annoyance to persons in the vicinity of said boats.

LOBSTER POTS PROHIBITED

(c) Lobster or fish pots and similar contrivances attached to the surface with a rope and buoy floating on the surface, shall not be set, established, or maintained in the channel of Annisquam River, nor in the channels of the principal arms thereof, nor in the regularly used fairways in Gloucester harbor and waters adjacent thereto, nor within the courses laid out for races maintained by the Eastern Point Yacht Club and the Annisquam Yacht Club, nor anywhere else so as to unreasonably restrict the free use and navigation of said waters, unless a permit in writing is issued by the State Department of Public Works.

Any violation of this section shall be punished by a fine of Twenty Dollars ($20) for each offence.

POINTS OF INTEREST

Gloucester, Cape Ann — First white man to visit its shores was Thorwald in 1004. Harbor called by Norsemen "Krossanes." Gosnold landed here in 1602 and found the place had been used as a base by Portuguese fishermen. In 1605 Champlain sailed by the Cape but did not land. The next year, September 1606, he entered the harbor which he named Le Beauport and made a map of it. Attacked by 200 Indians and sailed away the next day. In 1614 Capt. John Smith named it Cape Ann after Anne of Denmark, mother of King Charles I. First permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder. Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern Point. Dog Bar breakwater extends from a half mile long, completed in 1904 and extends from this point. On Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ram-

parts" occupies site of Fort Independence.

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the Cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenswood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from Fresh Water Cove or the so-called Old Salem road, Western avenue. Mason Walton's cabin, "Hermit of Bond's Hill," on this road. Well worth frequenting.

Beacon or Governor's Hill, near center of city, from Washington street. Small reservation at top from which a fine view may be obtained.

Dogtown Commons, site of deserted Revolutionary settlement. Reached from Gee avenue, Riverdale. Fine example of boulder deposits of glacial period. "Whale's Jaw," best known of these boulders, at edge of common. Rocking stone, etc., now taken over by the city as a water shed.

Wharves skirting the water front, interesting as affording "close-up" of fish curing, etc.

Babson House, opposite Ellery House, erected by Col. John Low about 1745. Old slave pens in attic.

Main street, first known as Fore, afterwards as Front street. Principal business avenue. Laid out 1642. Middle street, paralleling Main, contains many old colonial houses and the Judith Sargent house, the grounds of which, originally extending to Main street have been restored.

On Middle street are the First Parish (Unitarian) Church, oldest in Gloucester; Independent Christian (Universalist) first Universalist society in America, church edifice erected 1805; St. John's Episcopal Church, Trinity Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Sawyer Free Library and Reading Room, Middle street, adjoining Unitarian church, interior fine specimen of colonial woodwork. Originally home of Thomas Sanders, merchant.

Old Town Hall Square, at junction of Middle and Washington streets. Beautiful American Legion Memorial building and monument on which was placed statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughn Hyatt.

Fort Point, at western side of inner harbor, down Commercial street from Main, fortified in 1743. Now Italian quarter and rendezvous of fishermen of that nationality.

Drives around the Cape: Up Washington street, through Riverdale, past Annisquam, Bay View, Lanesville into Pigeon Cove, Rockport and completing the circuit to Gloucester. Almost a continuous ocean view, which was completed when the Bass Rocks-Land's End stretch was completed.

Beaches: Little Good Harbor and Long Beaches, between Bass Rocks and Land's End, Rockport. Wingershoeck Beach, West Gloucester, largest on Cape, two miles long, 600 feet deep at low tide; reached from Essex avenue, West Gloucester, down Concord street.

Quarries at Bay View and Pigeon Cove, among largest in country, near main highway.

Blynman canal, first cut in 1642 by Rev. Richard Blynman, at Western entrance of city.

Drives: "Little Heater," "Dark Hole" at West Gloucester.

Old Salem road, first highway from the town, blazed out in 1626, when part of the settlers went to Salem. Down Hesperus avenue (discontinued in 1892) to Salem. Name erroneously applied to Old Pest House road, leading through Ravenswood park from Western ave.

ATTEMPT DIFFICULT THINGS AS THOUGH EASY—

EASY MATTERS AS DIFFICULT.—Gratian.

A WAY OUT

IN THE LAST FOUR YEARS the colossal debt of thirty-five billion dollars has been piled up and passed on to posterity to pay—a veritable financial millstone around their necks.

When the true recountal of this financial saturnalia is read—as inevitably the historians of the future will write it—with the perspective and clarity of distance and impartiality—those responsible, no matter how high placed, will be held accountable at the bar of history and their motives and objectives impartially assayed.

When the coming generation is confronted with this staggering debt what will be its attitude and reaction? Will it say "Why should this tremendous sum be passed down to us to liquidate? We had no hand in the conditions which made this thing possible. We are in no way accountable. We have derived no benefits from this tremendous outlay. Then why should we pay it? By what processes of reasoning can it be justified?"

Then what? Will disavowal, or repudiation be justified. If so—and it is very probable that such may be the case—they have ample precedent for such a course?

Is there a way out? That is our present concern. In approaching the question it may be set down as a fundamental that those who contract and receive benefits for national, state or municipal expenditures should pay for them. In other words return to the time honored and honest method of pay-as-you-go. How is this to be done?

Let us here make what may at first be considered a digression with the ultimate idea of tying it up with the main factor in the solution of this problem.

Outstanding among the few American business institutions of the first magnitude that have dealt fairly with its stockholders during the past twenty years and especially in the cocaine decade is the American Telephone Company—and the William R. Hearst enterprises—referring specially to the Homestake mining company. Neither the Telephone company nor the Homestake company—which is Hearst—has diluted its stock so that insiders might pocket the profits that belonged to the stockholders. The fact that in this thimble-rigging orgy the Atlantic ocean plus the Great lakes had been poured into the stock machinery of the nation is really accountable for the great losses incurred by investors during the past five or six years. Put your finger right on that point as the major source of the big trouble.

Hearst has dealt honestly with his public in his stock and other flotations. His Homestake has paid nine percent and extra dividends and has soared to $450 but the stock has not been "cut" by those devious financial processes common to high finance. The stockholders have it all.

Similarly the Telephone company, a nine percent stock — into which no water has been injected. As an example of clean, high-grade honest dealing with its stockholders coupled with the ultimate in executive capacity and management, Walter Gifford of Salem, who is practically the whole works, outstands above all others in the nation. A notable example of clean-cut New England business methods. We'll come back to that a little later.

If Henry Ford had his stock on the market we might have included him. However shrewd Henry managed to put up wages to a $5.00 scale and beyond—not wholly from any altruistic motives—that the great mobility might ride in one of his chaises and come into possession of enough money to enable them to buy a Ford. There was method in Henry's philanthropy. Once a King of England expressed the wish that every subject might have a chicken in the pot regularly. Henry went the idea one better by providing beside the potted chicken a horseless buggy in which the poorest man might and does adventure the country at his will. Surely this has been the Golden age—depression and all, for the run of the coop population.

Another little interlude—to tie up to our general theme—and we will get back to our general premises.

In 1884 Gloucester granted a franchise to a Water company to put a water supply system free of charge. The company laid down cement-lined pipe—yclept in derision by the citizenry as the stove-pipe system. Several years after getting tired of the bargain the city went to court to take over the system as was provided. The High court decreed according to the evidence that the construction and entire equipment cost $275,000 but the dismay of the citizens in addition sent down a rescript that the city must pay $500,000 in addition to the franchise. Whereupon the populace was exceeding wrath and figuratively tore its hair but it paid the bill—perforce. Now keep the value of the franchise in mind—one third for actual expenditure and two thirds for franchise—an intangible asset. Goddard laid down by the Massachusetts High court. All right let's see if it'll work both ways.

Now then back to our mutttons how to pay these thirty-five billions. A universal sales tax would do the trick and is the simplest and most equitable way. But it is opposed for some singular reason by a large element especially the retailing interest. In Boston we find big men in opposition. For every tax necessarily must be a sales tax. What else is the gasoline tax which has shown itself to be a marvellous source of revenue? And what is the tax on liquor, tobacco, cigarettes and numerous other articles but a sales tax?

Heretofore the lonely one-horse owner has been the camel which has borne the burden. But evidence is in hand that the last straw has been piled on the cumbersome load. What then?

Back to the telephone company for an example. Pays a dividend of nine percent and has a surplus reserve. Construction for years has been carried on mainly out of profits. Practically it is a national monopoly reaching its tentacles into every section no matter how remote.

Coming here in Gloucester to put

MY SHIP

By Elizabeth Akers Allen

Down to the wharves, as the sun
goes down,
And the daylight's tumult and dust and din
Are dying away in the busy town,
I go to see if my ship comes in.

I gaze far over the quiet sea,
Rosy with sunset, like mellow wine,
Where ships, like lilies, lie tranquilly,
Many and fair, but I see not mine.

I question the sailors every night
Who over the bulwarks idly lean, Noting the sails as they come in sight:
"Have you seen my beautiful ship come in?"

"Whence does she come?" they ask of me:
"Who is her master, and what her name?"
And they smile upon me pityingly
When my answer is ever and ever the same.

Oh, mine was a vessel of strength and truth,
Her sails were white as a young lamb's fleece,
She sailed long since from the port of Youth,—
Her master was Love, and her name was Peace.

And like all beloved and beauteous things,
She faded in distance and doubt away,—
With only a tremble of snowy wings
She floated, swan-like, adown
the bay,

Carrying with her a precious freight,—
All I had gathered by years of pain;
A tempting prize to the pirate
Fate,—
And still I watch for her back again—

Watch from the earliest morning light,
Till the pale stars grieve o'er the dying day,
To catch the gleam of her canvas
white
Among the islands which gem
the bay.

But she comes not yet—she will never come To gladden my eyes and my spirit more;
And my heart grown hopeless and faint and dumb,
As I wait and wait on the lonesome shore,

Knowing that tempest and time
and storm
Have wrecked and shattered my beauteous bark;
Rank sea-weeds cover her wasting form,
And her sails are tattered and stained and dark.

But the tide comes up, and the tide
goes down,
And the daylight follows the night's eclipse,—
And still with the sailors, tanned and brown,
I wait on the wharves and watch the ships.

And still with a patience that is not hope,
For vain and empty it long hath been,
I sit on the rough shore's rocky slope,
And watch to see if my ship comes in.

AN EXHIBITION OF FIFTY PAINTINGS BY J. ELIOT ENNEKING

Reside Studio, 7 Dock Square Rockport, Mass., Through September 15th

Each season of the year has its unfailing and inescapable lure for the landscape painter as J.
Eliot Enneking proves again in his current exhibition of oils at the Reside Studio. Delicate young scenes of early spring, hot midsummer sunshine, the glowing reds and golds of crisp autumn days and comfortably blanketing snow in winter in the country are all here, each given its due meed of appreciative understanding.

Cape Ann, where the artist has maintained his summer studio for several years, contributes much to his subject matter. Many of his themes are familiar, of course, because of the popularity among painters of that distinctly paint-able region, but Mr. Enneking's version of even the best-known of these scenes is his own and his brush dips with equal sureness into poetry and paint.

Of course, the familiar "Motif
No. 1" is here; no exhibition by a painter of Rockport would be complete without that. And there is another view of "The Village Church" in the midst of autumn's gold and crimson finery. "The Harbor," too, with its fishing craft is here, also "A Rockport Homestead," calm and peaceful in serene old age, and a pleasant stretch of "Sandy Bay" Gloucester, too is portrayed on a "Grey Day," and in clearer weather with a crisp view,
"Across Gloucester Harbor." "East Gloucester," another lively artist colony, and a picturesque group of "Fish Houses" are depicted with their individual appeal by an appreciative brush.

From seashore to mountains is a transition accomplished with ease and pleasure. Distant slopes and peaks are wrapped in lavender and purple tones. Again autumn hues entrance us with their sunny glory.

"In the Glen," "Kearsarge Brook,"
"The Logging Road" and others hold the eye.

"Winter in Mystic," one of the smaller, sketch-size oils, presents a bit of old-time Connecticut, a one-time whaling town, with comfortable little cottages snug against the snow.

Although Mr. Enneking was largely taught by his father—he attended the Museum School, also, we believe—his style of painting differs decidedly from that of his father. His palette, naturally, is higher-keyed as of today. And while the landscapes of both men have the kinship of a distinctly lyrical quality, those of the younger man seem concerned more with design and pattern. The exhibition continues through this week.
These paintings belong to the class so often described as that kind that one can live with in peace and contentment.

THE GLOUCESTER SOCIETY OF ARTISTS—SECOND EXHIBIT

The Gloucester Society of Artists, Inc., cordially invites you to the opening of the second exhibition of the season at the gallery, Eastern Point road, Saturday afternoon, August 8th from two to six o'clock. Exhibition open until September 13th. Hours: week days 10 to 6, Sundays 2 to 6. Tea.

GO EASY ON YOUR NOSE

If your nose is close
To the grindstone rough,
And you hold it down
There long enough
In time you'll say
There's no such thing
As brooks that babble
And birds that sing.
These three will all
Your world compose—
Just You, the Stone
And your darned old Nose.

LUCY BROWNE DAVIS ANNEX TO GLOUCESTER SCIENTIFIC AND LITERARY ASSOCIATION

Gift of Her Sister Miss Catalina Davis -- Valuable Contribution to City's Historical Buildings

THE OLD MASTER MOORE HOUSE IN HESPERUS LANE, FRESHWATER COVE
In this house, undoubtedly one of the oldest on the Cape, Master William Moore taught the youth and young women also, higher navigation, enabling them to sail their ships to all waters of the globe. He was the author of valuable navigation treatises and tables and although his fame has not been as general as Bowditch, was the equal of the latter in all principles of the science. House now owned by Miss Florence Snelling.

The recent dedication of the Lucy Brown Davis annex to the building of the Cape Ann Scientific Literary and Historical Association marks the second of such institutions now held in trust for preservation and semi-public purposes under private trusteeship—the other being the Judith Sargent house on Middle st., a small charge being made for admission for caretakers' maintenance. Both are considered museum pieces of the best of the Colonial period.

Both function on practically parallel lines. The Sargent house was given by a member of that family as a memorial to Judith Sargent, for whom it was built as a wedding present and the Sargent family in particular.

The Cape Ann society, Pleasant and Middle sts., secured as permanent headquarters several years ago one of the commodious three-decker Colonial mansions favored by the wealthy sea captains and firms in the foreign trade just before and after the Revolution when fortunes were accumulated rapidly.

Since the acquisition of this building its furnishing has been developed largely from the feminine point of view. While there are certain rooms in which relics and objects of the olden time sea captains are preserved and shown, the prevailing motif is the feminine. Here are rooms containing authentic furniture of the old-time wealthy families, many masterpieces of the English artisans. In others may be seen the gowns, draperies, fans, etc., worn and carried by the feminine-elect of that period.

Not Historical

There has been no concerted attempt to assemble articles of historical interest relating to the early period of the town or what may be termed a general historical museum. This opinion, if such it may be termed, was noted and voiced by Roger W. Bates at the dedication. He expressed a wish that more be attempted along that line. Since that expression of opinion the same thought has been endorsed by others.

While this may be so, it is well to bear in mind that such a collection is a far-reaching appeal as may be witnessed by the numbers in the series that frequent both the Sargent and the Gloucester Historical houses. A greater part of these visitors are newcomers whose ancestors three or four generations ago trekked on to the west. Their descendants grown up to do and interested in tracing their family beginnings in this country turn to New England, just as do the anders to old England to look up ancestral homes of their Old d forbears.

sily eight out of ten of the sum- residents on the scene or at hotels of the family are here infrequent- though the air route annihilating vomen. Espe- y is astonishment expressed inas- h as the national government in alphabetical activities has paid icial attention toward the preser- on of such landmarks and has allocated such buildings for museum purposes notably at Portland and other cities.

Such an institution would have been a distinct asset to the city, in fact visi- tors express disappointment that such is not the case.

The Custom House practically fire- proof, centrally located, would have been just the location and was admir- ably adapted for such a purpose. But "where there is no vision the people perish." The golden opportunity has gone. Perhaps some public-spirited individual may leave a bequest for such a purpose. But we doubt it.

ST. JOHN'S FAIR

Posters displayed around the Cape are announcing the summer fair of St. John's Episcopal Church, to be held at the Hotel Delphine next Thursday, August 13 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Every society in the parish will be represented and the entire event is being chairmanned by Mrs. Walter Adams, president of St. John's Guild.

The Younger Set will be delighted with the display of toys and grabs pro- ferred for their amusement, and their mothers, if wise, will purchase the smart little dresses and suits that the ladies of the Guild have been making during the year.

The St. Agnes Guild and St. John's Boys' Club, two organizations of girls and boys under sixteen, will combine forces at the grab table, an attractive arrangement in the Dutch manner, with surprises for both children and adults. A White Elephant table, that popular perennial of church fairs, is under the auspices of the Mesdames Worden, Cornelius Coakley and William Ballard. The Young People's Fellowship will sponsor Toyland and the Candy table, with Miss Helen Horton as chairman, assisted by the Misses May and Clithero Dean and Miss Marguerite Ballard. The Food table will be taken care of by the Newfoundland Society, under the direction of Mrs. Thomas Best, presi- dent.

PERSONALIA

Dr. Richard and Mrs. Pomeroy of New York City are departing on an extended trip to California and Alaska. Dr. Pomeroy a native of this city has usually passed his vacations as one of the crew of the schooner Portugal, Capt. Albino Perirria (high line of the swordfishing fleet) and being a skilled photographer secured some excellent and unusual snap shots of close-up tussles with these bulldogs of the deep (swordfish).

Another Gloucester boy who has gone out into the wide world and made good in the great city is F. Bur- ton Fisher, assistant manager of the Hotel Plaza, New York. He too on his vacations hies himself to the quaint old fishing burg. All this week he has been at Marblehead a spectator at the grandest Corinthian yachting meet on the American continent when some 400 of these swift craft cometed for supremacy in their class. As his guests were Rudolph Schraeder, man- ager of the Harvard Club and Arthur Norton, president of the National Ho- tel Association of Boston.

HARRY H. WIGGIN

Harry H. Wiggin, 71, for more than fifty years a summer resident at An- nisquam and for a long period the commodore of the Annisquam Yacht Club met his death accidentally Thursday afternoon by falling down a pair of stairs of the former Gorman Restaurant in Main street. The place was undergoing alterations and Mr. Wiggin, interested, was making an in- spection when it is supposed he fell from the top to the bottom of the stairs where he was found by work- men returning from dinner. Death may have been instantaneous accord- ing to the opinion of medical men.

He was keenly interested in all that pertained to Squam and in addition to his big business interests in Boston was a prime mover in the Rockholm development movement here. He leaves a wife, who was Gertrude Sher- burne, two sons, Morrill and Sher- burne, and a daughter, Gertrude, wife of William B. Stearns Jr.

EASTERN POINT

CONGRATULATIONS to young Jonathan Raymond and Robert Elwell outstanding Gloucester mariners entering as dark horses—fine yatching metaphor—in the Nova Scotia Prince of Wales cup race at Yarmouth and vanquishing the best in their class in fair, square sailing where skill told. It was a red-letter triumph for Eastern Point and put old Gloucester on the map—although well known down Nova Scotia way. Perchance in some happier day the proposed club house may become a reality and the vase be one of the major exhibits in the trophy room—if its possession is to be permanent—concerning which we are uninformed.

Missing $4000 worth of diamonds and as much again in other jewelry, thieves ransacked Houndsmoor, the summer home of Mrs. Frederick L. Morrill of Boston, last Saturday night, and stole articles valued at $300.

In the very drawer from which the invaders snatched gold trinkets valued at $300, the $4000 diamonds lay in a chamois bag. Other valuable jewelry and antiques were in some of the rooms which were searched before the thieves fled.

The theft occurred while the servants were out. Mrs. Morrill told police that when she went out with her daughter Marianne, she did not lock the door.

And this recalls the Raffles job done on two succeeding seasons at Eastern Point some fifteen years ago the late Gen. George A. Reid being one of the victims. After the owners of several

EAST GLOUCESTER

A most delightful song recital was given at the Hawthorne Inn Manse on Sunday evening by Miss Elizabeth Jane Taylor of Overbrook, Pa. Miss Taylor is a guest at the Inn for several days.

The guests were invited to hear this charming singer through the courtesy of the proprietor of the Inn, Thomas W. White and Mrs. Lulu Farrin, assistant manager.

The program included a most pleasing group of French songs, such favorites as "The Brown Bird," "Who'll Buy My Lavender," "The Last Rose of Summer," "The Marriage Market" and others. The "Bell Song" from "Lakme," was particularly well sung. It will be remembered that this is one of Lily Pons' favorite songs, which she renders so beautifully in radio concerts and on the opera stage.

Miss Barbara Goward of the New England Conservatory of Music was Miss Taylor's accompanist.

Miss Taylor possesses a fine voice of clear bell-like quality, which she uses artistically. She possesses marked flexibility also. She is a pupil of the well-known Henry Hotz of Philadelphia.

Miss Taylor gave another concert at the Inn on Thursday evening which was equally enjoyed by a large audience.

Alice Fischer Harcourt, prominent actress of New York City has arrived at the Hawthorne Inn for the remainder of the season. Mrs. Harcourt has spent a great many seasons at the Inn and her husband, the late William K. Harcourt, also spent many seasons at this resort. He was a yachting enthusiast, owning a boat, often entering the races.

Mrs. Josephine S. Pearce of New York City, one of Hawthorne Inn's annual guests of many seasons is registered at the Inn for a usual long stay.

Miss Jean Nutting Oliver, the Boston painter is again registered at the Delphine Hotel for a season's stay.

One of the 50th anniversary features of Hawthorne Inn will be a "Gay Nineties Ball" to be held in the Casino on the evening of August 15. Mrs. Alice Fischer Harcourt is one of the prime movers for this unique affair. The guests will wear quaint costumes of that period.

The Tuesday evening bridge club of the Hawthorne Inn held its party in the Manse parlor this week. Mrs. Harcourt, the hostess, being in charge again this season.

"And a good time was had by all" was the exclamation of the young guests of the Hotel Rockaway on leaving Wingaersheek Beach, Sunday evening after

MILADY GOES SHOPPING

Gloucester, Mass.

Dear Eloise,

Another achievement to my career—I have become quite an accomplished gardener. The other day, when I went over town, I went into L. E. Andrews and bought a garden set which contained all the implements one needs. I haven't discovered what each one is used for yet, but I shall in time. Tim, the Marsh's gardener, has very ably assisted me in making a rock garden for my own, and I am very proud of it. Of course, nothing has bloomed yet, but I live in hopes.

You know one must have the proper clothes for working in a garden, so I made a pair of overalls to wear. They are of soft yellow broadcloth, and to go with them, I bought a tricky white linen blouse at Mimi's. As a completion to my outfit, I also purchased at Mimi's one of those cagey "kerchief affairs" for headwear. It is a kerchief with a visor attached (perfect for the up-to-date gardener).

Mr. and Mrs. Marsh have returned from New York, so once again, I have settled down to my secretarial duties. Mr. Marsh disapproved slightly of the small amount of work I had done last week (you know my mind was entirely centered on Charles' affair with Mrs. Robbins). I have been working like a Trojan to make amends for last week's misdemeanors. We have finally straightened out matters with the Cooperative Bank, which is a great relief, gone over the statements of the Cape Ann National Bank, and checked some investments with Hornblower & Weeks. By the way, I have made a moderate investment with this concern. Mr. Marsh attended to it for me when he was there last week. Eloise, I don't believe in the "get rich quick" plan, but Mr. Marsh's investments have benefited him greatly, so I am sure mine will be safe.

Maybelle has been called away because of the death of her sister. As you know, Mrs. Marsh is not fond of preparing meals, so I suggested to her that I undertake the task and she was very well satisfied with the idea. Remembering my instructions on buying provisions, I went to the First National Store. I bought all that would be needed for a chicken dinner, and everything turned out beautifully. Mr. Marsh complimented me on it and that sort of "evened up the score" between us, but best of all, Charles raved about it incessantly, and I thought for a time I might be defeating the widow. Charles' father is greatly perturbed over his son's affair with Mrs. Robbins, but I have tried to assure him that it is just an infatuation.

I had been invited on a boat ride and had to dash home to dress. However, I just had time to rush in the Gloucester National Bank to make a deposit.

I guess you have heard enough about my shopping tour for now. I must tell you about the boat ride. Of course, Jerry and Charles were there, Mrs. Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. Marsh, and about eight other couples. We set out from the pier about seven-thirty p. m., our destination being Salem Willows. The place is an amusement park about fourteen miles from Gloucester. We had planned to "josh around" a bit and then have something to eat. But sad to say, we never reached Salem Willows. We were riding along very smoothly, picking phosphorus from the water, when all of a sudden we found ourselves completely deluged in fog. Our pilot tried to retrace his course, but to no good end—we made no headway, but only struck a reef which was rather terrifying. At first everyone was rather harrassed, but all decided it would be best to drop anchor and wait. This, of course, made everyone feel safer and more at ease. It was hoped that the fog would lift in a short time, but it continued until early morning, laying very heavily about us. Each one tried to make the best of the ordeal except Mrs. Robbins, who proved to be a very trying specimen. She continually moaned and wept, saying she would never see land again, and wondering what her acquaintances would say. Charles tried to his utmost to console her but finally grew thoroughly disgusted with her too childish actions. Being SO disgusted he sort of turned to me to figure out some way to liven up the party. First, we started to sing popular songs, then the singing drifted to the more comforting hymns. Mrs. Marsh said it would be much more appropriate for the occasion to sing "Nearer My God To Thee." And, strange as it may seem, it left everyone in a more peaceful frame of mind. This kept up for a few hours, until midnight found half of the crew asleep. Those who had managed to stay awake had become very hungry, and by chance we had brought along some of Gorton's Clam Chowder. Daybreak found a much bedraggled party, anxious to see "terra firma" once again. We found the fog had scattered a bit, so we headed for shore. We landed approximately at seven-thirty that morning to be greeted by a very upset mass of friends and relatives. Each was deposited safely at home with the same idea in view—something to eat! We ransacked the Coolerator and, much to our delight, some of the cold chicken was left from dinner. We shall always remember our unfortunate boat ride.

I guess I have finally defeated the widow—Charles invited me to dine with him at Stage Coach Inn. This puts me in a peculiar position as Jerry has asked me to go dancing at the

the argument more clearly into the mind of the reader. This company has about 3500 subscribers—get the telephone book and count 'em. The average payment yearly is $40 each—total per year $150,000. Total cost of local maintenance and upkeep $40,000. In addition for out-of-town tolls $25,000 annually. Also in addition it has gone into the advertising field from which it reaps a substantial profit from the advertising in its books—its greed for profit invading the field heretofore filled by the small local advertising man.

Now whatever profit that comes in this city to this company which pays its stockholders nine percent comes by reason of the millions of dollars expended by the citizens in building up in its road work and other municipal activities and every penny of this profit to the company comes from something to which it has not contributed a penny. The company does not come here for any other reason than the profit making one. It it were not profitable they would not be here.

They are enjoying a valuable franchise far beyond that of the water company for which they have not paid a copper. In every reason of justice and equity the telephone company should pay at least $10,000 of its more than $100,000 local profit annually to the extinction of the national debt or some local debt. And the same logic applies to every community all over the country. The company then can pay a good six percent.

This is not all: An old age pension system has been adopted by the state applicable to all citizens resident here since for twenty years. In a way this has been provided for by the Roosevelt old age security bill with which—in principle—we are in thorough accord—when its crudities are pared down. Where are the funds for this coming from? And here comes the local application to which we have given a national slant.

The same argument as to value of franchise will apply to every out-of-town business which comes into the city. In fact it is already in operation. The city taxes through the medium of the Transient Vendors law all owners of summer shops who come down here in the season to take advantage of the trade arising from the coming of well-to-do to the city.

They would not come here if it were not profitable to do so and, will he, nil he, come up to the municipal dough dish and pay for the privilege. The principle laid down by the Courts as to the value of franchise applies right here and should be extended generally beyond the summer shops.

To whom—which? The multiple chain store system nickel-dime gold mines evidenced by the costly yachts, palatial residences rapidly approaching the billionaire stage—purchasing all the luxuries. Go into some of these establishments, understaffed, see how the sales girls are driven to wait on the customers if inability to get waited upon in sufficient time is considered.

Here also is an outside institution which comes in to take advantage of the franchise. There are two of these concerns here which if forced to pay for the privilege would in the opinion of students of the proposition pay $5000 annually each for the right rather than move out. The lesser ones in proportion. Put this money into local old age pensions.

In this category we think the big chain grocery and provision stores should be omitted. Admittedly as the result of competition they reduce prices of food necessities to a level which would not accrue if they were not in the field. All their employees are local men—from matters of public policy—living here with their families. In general we are opposed to any tax on foods other than the general tax they now pay. If any addition and inevitably the cost of food-stuffs would necessarily go up. So this argument as far as foods is concerned does not apply. The underdog, the camel—mixed metaphor with a vengeance—would have another straw added to his load.

And how about the big Boston grocery stores which load up great vans of provisions daily distributed around the cape—How about the big baking concerns which do likewise in opposition to the small local dealers here? How about the big milk producing concerns in opposition to local dairymen striving to keep up the standards of their product? How about out of town laundry concerns and we might go on quite a list farther. None of these pay one cent of tax for the privilege, the help perhaps bringing along their lunches. These reap the cream of the summer business for the up-build of which they have not contributed a jot or tittle while the local man, employer of local help, payer of taxes is left to struggle along the lean months to keep his head above water. Answer this question. Is this fair or equitable? Should not a tax or license—placing these people on the same basis as the transient vendor be imposed paying at least $500 down to $100 per season—to the old age fund—to compensate in a small way for the privilege what's unfair about it.

Coming to the national end and add a stiff tax on the movie producers who squander millions, radio companies and others and easily—on a sale tax alone three billion annually could be collected toward national debt extinction and wipe out the entire amount in twelve years and let the coming generation start off from a clean financial scratch.

Be it understood that The Shore advocates no governmental taking over of private enterprise otherwise than to see that they get its share of the inordinate profits and shoulder their just share of the national debt as well as the little fellow.

The inordinate fortunes of the Rockefeller, Duponts and others have been accumulated how? By the protection afforded them by the proletariat? Had Germany won the war America—this is documentary evidence from the German files—would be made to pay through the nose—just as France did by the very effectual methods of the Franco-German war in 1870. Who prevented this and saved their fortunes—for they were marked to pay the freight. The common soldier and sailor who in the trenches of the land and the heaving

NOTICE TO WATER TAKERS

Numerous complaints have reached this office that the hours prescribed for use of hose and sprinkler are being exceeded. Also, that hose is being used illegally without any payment being made for use of same.

We respectfully call your attention to the regulations.

1. Use of HOSE is limited to ONE hour daily BY HAND ONLY, rate $5.00 per year.
2. Use of SPRINKLERS is limited to two hours daily, rate $10.00 per year. Hose or sprinkler may be used between hours of 6—9 A.M. and 5—8 P.M. Unattended hose will be charged for at the sprinkler rate.

Penalty for violation of the above regulations is a fine of Twenty Dollars.

This notice is not to be construed as restricting the lawful use of hose and sprinkler as set forth in the regulations. We wish only to warn those who are abusing these rules that such excess must stop or drastic action will follow.

THE ABOVE RESTRICTIONS AS TO HOURS AND USE OF HOSE DO NOT APPLY TO THOSE TAKERS WHO ARE SUPPLIED THROUGH A METER.

We respectfully request your cooperation.

to take the series, went along nicely until the semi-finals.

Then in a sensational upset the Pleon Yacht Club crew, winners of a leg in 1981, came through and retired the Vineyard Haven crew to become favorites in turn.

Eastern Point, newcomers to the racing game and up to now almost entirely unknown, had coasted along through the series.

Pleon took the first race of the finals handily. But the Gloucester boys took the second race and today, with a light and fluky wind, Eastern Point won the third race, making it two-one.

As the fourth race rounded the course an air of expectancy was felt all along the gallery of the Acadian Yacht Club House. And gamely the Eastern Point crew came home a winner.

trenches of sea literally went through hell's fire to save the very element which banded together have since fought the hands that saved them?

Was Huey Long right when he said, ten million was enough for any man or family. Many of the higher middle brackets financially are coming round to that opinion.

Look at Spain? A new day is coming and a newer fairer and equitable system of shouldering public burdens is at hand.

And in all the above has the dreamings of an impossible Utopia been set down? Not a bit of it. All the propositions put forward in the above, the governments of Europe have in operation. The most conservative nation in the world, England, was saved from financial bankruptcy and brought into national solvency by the adoption of these methods and today shows a clean budget. The Shore has advanced nothing original, new or untried but on the contrary the workable economic schedules of the most enlightened of nations. Now copy them on this side.

OPINJAY FIRST AT THE HEAD

GLoucester, Aug. 1—On the annual Gloucester-Marblehead run on Saturday Jacob D. Cox Jr.'s Opinjay led the fleet into Marblehead. Injun, Hastings Gamage's tier in the triangle class, led nine others in this division with Scalene, trailing by five minutes in second place. A Sandy Bay star, Clifford Beal's Maidie III, led that class.

The Cape Cod knockabouts were sent away an hour ahead of the larger craft and Jack Clay 3rd's Clipper led the craft into Marblehead harbor with Lucky Wind in second place.

The wind was northwest and light at the start but hauled into the southwest before the boats were half way to their destination. The summary:

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

Attention is called to the following provisions of an ordinance governing Gloucester Harbor. Sec. 44(a).

POWER BOATS — MUFLERS

(a) Power driven boats shall not exceed a speed of ten (10) miles per hour in the inner harbor, and for the purposes of determining what is the inner harbor, same shall comprise all the waters of Gloucester harbor lying northeasterly of an imaginary line extending from the spindle standing southwesterly of the Tarr & Wonsom copper paint factory directly across to the Fort Wharf, or by whatever name said wharf may be called.

(b) Boats with internal combustion engines shall be provided and equipped with a muffler or underwater exhaust of a type or types approved by and used in conformity with the rules and regulations authorized by the Commissioner of Public Safety, so that the noise of the same shall not cause unreasonable annoyance to persons in the vicinity of said boats.

LOBSTER POTS PROHIBITED

(c) Lobster or fish pots and similar contrivances attached to the surface with a rope and buoy floating on the surface, shall not be set, established, or maintained in the channel of Annisquam River, nor in the channels of the principal arms thereof, nor in the regularly used fairways in Gloucester harbor and waters adjacent thereto, nor within the courses laid out for races maintained by the Eastern Point Yacht Club and the Annisquam Yacht Club, nor anywhere else so as to unreasonably restrict the free use and navigation of said waters, unless a permit in writing is issued by the State Department of Public Works.

Any violation of this section shall be punished by a fine of Twenty Dollars ($20) for each offense.

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

In the year nineteen hundred and thirty-two,

AN ORDINANCE

providing for certain ISOLATED "STOP" signs.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

SECTION 1—Every driver of a vehicle, bus or other conveyance, approaching an intersecting way at which there exists facing him, an official sign, authorized by this Municipal Council, said sign having apart from this regulation, the written approval of the Department of Public Works of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and bearing the word "STOP" shall before entering and proceeding through the intersection, bring such vehicle, bus or other conveyance to a complete STOP at such line as may be clearly marked, or, if there is no line so marked, at a place between the said sign and the line of the street intersection.

In the case of a line of two or more vehicles approaching such "STOP" sign, the drivers of the second and third vehicles in any group shall not be required to stop more than once at said designated line or place or in the immediate vicinity.

This ordinance shall not apply when the traffic is otherwise directed by a police officer or by any other lawful traffic regulating sign signal or device.

SECTION 2—In accordance with the foregoing, the Municipal Council hereby authorize the erection and maintenance of an official "STOP" sign or "stop" signs as to face:

1—North and southbound drivers on Magnolia avenue at Western avenue.

2—Northbound drivers on Central avenue at Washington street.

3—Southbound drivers on Central avenue at Western avenue.

4—Southbound drivers on Prospect street at Main street.

SECTION 3—Any persons found guilty of violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be guilty of misdemeanor and may be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars ($20.00) for each offense.

SECTION 4—All acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 5 — This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after the expiration of ten (10) days from the date of its final passage.

In Municipal Council, April 1, 1932.

Passed first and second readings and to be enrolled.

ALLEN F. GRANT, City Clerk

In Municipal Council, April 1, 1932, Passed to be ordained.

Gorton-Pew Fisheries

GLOUCESTER, MASS.

Founded in 1849

The above spirited painting depicts a stirring incident at the Battle of Santiago in 1898, when the American fleet under command of Admiral Schley destroyed the Spanish Armada, under Admiral Cervera, which had been bottled up and attempted to escape to sea. Capt. Richard Wainwright in the Morgan Yacht Corsair, sold to the government and rechristened Gloucester, covered himself and crew with glory and added another gallant deed to the list of American naval triumphs when, steaming boldly forward he engaged and destroyed the Spanish destroyer Pluton. The painting from which the picture was made is by Gilbert T. Margeson of Rockport, from an account by a participant in the engagement. It was originally published in the magazine "Blue Jacket."

POINTS OF INTEREST

Gloucester, Cape Ann—First white man to visit its shores was Thorwald in 1004. Harbor called by Norsemen "Krossanes." Gosnold landed here in 1602 and found the place had been used as a base by Portuguese fishermen. In 1605 Champlain sailed by the Cape but did not land. The next year, September 1606, he entered the harbor which he named Le Beauport and made a map of it. Attacked by 200 Indians and sailed away the next day. In 1614 Capt. John Smith named it Cape Ann after Anne of Denmark, mother of King Charles I. First permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder. Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern Point. Dog Bar breakwater extends from a half mile long, completed in 1904 and extends from this point. On Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ram-

parts" occupies site of Fort Independence.

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the Cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenswood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from Fresh Water Cove or the so-called Old Salem road, Western avenue. Mason Walton's cabin, "Hermit of Bond's Hill," on this road. Well worth frequenting.

Beacon or Governor's Hill, near center of city, from Washington street. Small reservation at top from which a fine view may be obtained.

Dogtown Commons, site of deserted Revolutionary settlement. Reached from Gee avenue, Riverdale. Fine example of boulder deposits of glacial period. "Whale's Jaw," best known of these boulders, at edge of common. Rocking stone, etc., now taken over by the city as a water shed.

Wharves skirting the water front, interesting as affording "close-up" of fish curing, etc.

Babson House, opposite Ellery House, erected by Col. John Low about 1745. Old slave pens in attic.

Main street, first known as Fore, afterwards as Front street. Principal business avenue. Laid out 1642. Middle street, paralleling Main, contains many old colonial houses and the Judith Sargent house, the grounds of which, originally extending to Main street have been restored.

On Middle street are the First Parish (Unitarian) Church, oldest in Gloucester; Independent Christian (Universalist) first Universalist society in America, church edifice erected 1805; St. John's Episcopal Church, Trinity Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Sawyer Free Library and Reading Room, Middle street, adjoining Unitarian church. Interior fine specimen of colonial woodwork. Originally home of Thomas Sanders, merchant.

Old Town Hall Square, at junction of Middle and Washington streets. Beautiful American Legion Memorial building and monument on which was placed statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughn Hyatt.

Fort Point, at western side of inner harbor, down Commercial street from Main, fortified in 1743. Now Italian quarter and rendezvous of fishermen of that nationality.

Drives around the Cape: Up Washington street, through Riverdale, past Annisquam, Bay View, Lanesville into Pigeon Cove, Rockport and completing the circuit to Gloucester. Almost a continuous ocean view, which was completed when the Bass Rocks-Land's End stretch was completed.

Beaches: Little Good Harbor and Long Beaches, between Bass Rocks and Land's End, Rockport. Wingaersheek Beach, West Gloucester, largest on Cape, two miles long, 600 feet deep at low tide; reached from Essex avenue, West Gloucester, down Concord street.

Quarries at Bay View and Pigeon Cove, among largest in country, near main highway.

Blynman canal, first cut in 1642 by Rev. Richard Blynman, at Western entrance of city.

Drives: "Little Heater," "Dark Hole" at West Gloucester.

Old Salem road, first highway from the town, blazed out in 1626, when part of the settlers went to Salem. Down Hesperus avenue (discontinued in 1892) to Salem. Name erroneously applied to Old Pest House road, leading through Ravenswood park from Western ave.

"He dwelt with the tribes of marsh and moor.
He sate at the board of kings,
He tasted the toil of the burdened slave
And the joy that triumph brings;

But whether to jungle or palace hall
Or white-walled tent he came,
He was brother to kings and soldier and slave,
His welcome was the same."

THE VETERAN VOTE

WHAT EFFECT the veterans vote on the forthcoming national campaign? For it is conceded that if cast in practically a solid bloc it may be the determining factor. That was the case in the last presidential election.

Thoroughly angered over the attitude of the last administration the veterans turned almost in a solid mass against Hoover. For had not Roosevelt in his acceptance pronouncement promised "to do justice to the veteran."

Now it is no dark secret that the Rooseveltian concept of justice and the veterans notion of the same is as far out of kilter as the North and the South Poles.

The question is how far will this opposition carry in the November election? That it has shown its power in the last three years is evidenced in the fact of its overwhelming victory on the bonus question. Against the most determined opposition that any measure has faced in national history, the President, solidly intrenched as any dictator, the national Chamber of Commerce with its subsidiaries in every city, town and hamlet, the National Economy League and International Bankers anxious to have their private debts with foreign countries settled by governmental aid—it has won out after a three-year gruelling battle. The Bull Run of the opening days of the present administration has been converted into the deciding Apomattox of conquest. Victorious it stands today more united than ever a factor to be reckoned with.

What is its potential voting strength? Some four millions entered the service. Of that number some 3,500,000 applied for and received the bonus money in June last month.

Commander James Van Zandt of the Veterans of Foreign Wars estimates that the actual strength of every veteran is four votes namely, himself, wife and his two parents.

This it is conceded is a conservative estimate. There are sisters, brothers, cousins, aunts all vitally interested and "the female of the species is more deadly (in earnest) than the male" the most of them enrolled in the women's auxiliaries. Then again there are the junior organizations, sons and daughters of World War Veterans, many of whom will vote in the 1940 presidential election, constantly coming of age. It is a safe estimate that the potential voting influence of every World War Veteran is as one to five or six.

The dissatisfaction with the administration's concept of "Justice" is, as is well known, wide and deep. The writer ran into an example of this quite recently in this city. A former fisherman had enlisted in the government's call for skilled seamen—some 500 responded in three days here several weeks before the formal declaration of war. He died at 77 leaving seven adult children all of voting age. All had voted for Roosevelt. But their attitude had changed. His compensation had been taken away and only after much effort was a modicum of the original sum allowed after he had been cut off altogether. Originally he had taken out a government veteran's insurance policy for $5000 but on account of increasing premium demands had been compelled to reduce it to $1000. The family felt bitterly about this and so expressed themselves. There is no question as to whom they will not vote for. And this is no exceptional case. Rather wide spread and far flung.

If we accept the minimum quota of four veterans as a multiple of voting strength there are some 14,000,000 votes to be considered; if the five to one ratio this is increased to 20,000,000. In close states these may be the deciding factor. More especially in every congressional district each apportioned as to a unit strength of 40,000, and in senatorial, state-wide nomination and election primaries.

Now and then figures are published as to the World War Veterans dying at the rate of 40,000 annually the assumption being that their power decreases in that ratio. But how about their children coming to voting age? Children who demand that the practice of widow's pensions—established from the beginning of the government—be re-established. Instead of the influence decreasing it is increasing a geometrical ratio in their descendants. An example: The local G. R. Post in this city reached its maximum strength at 260 membership out of a potential 1500. Its descendants, Sons and Daughters Union Veterans and its two Womans auxiliaries numbering some 500 votes are more potent politically today than the original body and many by natural affiliation will line up on election day with the World War contingent.

These then, are the facts to be considered in sizing up the outcome of the next election day. Both Congress and Senate appraised them with unerring eye when they overrode the President's wishes in passing the bonus payment bill over the veto.

It was generally accepted that one of the prime objects of the CCC was to enroll young men who would naturally offset the Veteran influence a vote and, if necessary be transformed into a trained military unit, to combat any overt acts of the Veterans, such as bonus marches and the like. Such was openly advocated in the anti-Veteran press and this view was widespread but the plan—if so intended has proved futile.

The young men given $30 a month sending $10 or more home were so dissatisfied. Twenty a month in semi-military regimentation had no allure for ambitious, worth-while young men, the majority of whom soon tired of the outfit leaving its membership a negative contingent far from militaristic in its notions and prospective as anti-Veteran shock troops.

It is evident that the doughboys and doughgirls will present solid ranks in the doughdish on election rounds. They didn't want to go but were taken by the nape of neck as draftees and thrown into the trenches and promised all sorts of rewards, present and future. Now they are in a collective mood and intend to cash in on the promises.

THE LIGHTSHIP

William Hervey Woods, in the Century.

She lies far out along the bar,
A ghost by day, by night a star
That sways and swings and dips;
Though chained, she knows no anchored ease—
Though tides are full and fresh the breeze,
She rides, but may not sail the seas,
This sentinel of ships;
Hers but to watch by ruin's lair,
And lift her warning light in air.

Her sides are oak of triple strength,
Her mast a pine tree's sturdy length,
Unhelped of boom or spar
The lantern bears, her only sail;
Yet naked thus she dares the gale,
With plunging prow and buried rail,
Or breasts the breakers' war—
An amazon of courage high
Who may not fight and will not fly.

Her sister ships their wings have spread,
Perhaps by dark Magellan's head
Or on Ionian seas; Dim Greenland's isles of ice they knew,
They sailed Hawaii's waters blue,
And Aden's shallows loitered through,
Along the dying breeze;
And she, in calms when cables slack,
May drift five fathoms out—and back.

Not hers in glassy bays to seem
A dream-bark mirrored in a dream,
Nor hers the joy to feel
Her black hull on and onward whirled,
The rush of winds, the waves up-curled High o'er her bows, as round the world
She sweeps on bounding keel.
While ocean 'neath her laughs and swings,
And ropes are songs and sails are wings.

And yet no bulk of senseless stone
Is she, on some stern cliff alone—
A ship's heart in her beats;
She thrills to every tide that turns,
Her naked mast for canvas yearns,
And each proud timber in her spurns
The chain that still defeats
Her forward plunge, and holds her slave
Whose will is tameless as the wave.

She will not always fettered ride—
Some night at turning of the tide,
When God's great winds are out.
A lightning bolt her bonds will rive,
And she, unchained, alert, alive,
Will on her one mad voyage drive,
And, 'mid the mighty rout, While heaven and earth com-mingled roar,
Pass—to be seen of men no more.

Art and Dramatic

ARTISTRY AT THE GLOUCESTER SOCIETY'S GALLERY —SECOND EXHIBIT

At the Gloucester Artist's Gallery there are many extremely interesting and delicate subjects appreciatively portrayed on canvas. The black and whites also grip the spectator's imagination. Among the sculptured work, one feels the thought that the creator placed in his work. The placement of all the paintings, black and whites, and sculpture is one to catch to the best advantage the shadings that result from the falling light. Among some of the notable paintings there, one is sure to notice "Sako, the Japanese Dancer." The brilliant coloring shades in completely with the black background and the use of the static line gives one a sense of rhythm.

Margaret Fitzhugh Browne contributed this work of art.

Oscar Anderson's "Hillside and Meadow" catches all the lights that decorate a golden afternoon. His application of pigments gives one the sensation of being near to Nature and seeing through his eyes what he has placed before us.

In Pamela S. Adams "Portrait" she shows a delicate understanding and sympathy and transfers this feeling to her canvas.

"The Sea" by Benjamin Cratz, is broad in his treatment and generous in his choice. His coloring is natural and one who knows the seas will appreciate the understanding with which this was done.

Another picture which catches the imagination is "In the Glen" by J. Eliot Enneking. The nuances of shading and his application of pigments places him in the Realist class.

Sara Kramer Glass exhibits "Park in Spring," which makes one long to wander through the park and see all the delicate subjects that she could see and bring before us.

The picture "The China Sea," by Gordon Grant is a typical picture by the artist. There is a vigor felt and expressed and the knowledge shown of sea life is truly sincere.

"Gloucester Docks" by Emile A. Gruppe is the scene of a typical Gloucester. The pigment placement is subtle and of a wide range.

Neil MacEachern's "Manchester Village" shows a complete understanding of his subject. One who knows would certainly enjoy the treatment given to this artist's work. He has several black and whites and one or two small pictures, also exhibited.

"Vision" by Ronda Rheal is a striking example of mysticism. It is all in a dull tone and gives one over to thought for a while.

Unberto Romane's "Psyche and the Sculptor" is another large painting that will attract many people. The brilliant coloring makes it stand out as one of the most interesting and the reality of it leaves one admiring.

"Neptune's Playmates" by Antoinette Inglis is also of the Realist type. The sympathetic understanding of children is shown in her delicate treatment of her subject and her perfect background.

Among the sculpture, one work of art that greatly interests one is called "Coupe Horses" by Rosamond Sears. The lines that curve and the position of the horses that shows to advantage the animals at their best makes one appreciate our dumb beasts.

MacLean Marshall's "Phaon," a statue of a nude, is very striking. The use of the lines of the body is quite dynamic and the work being done in bronze adds a certain distinction.

A clever black and white drawing is "Scotty" by Elsa Anshutz. The dog is placed on a dead white background and this makes him completely the center of attraction.

There are many more interesting and thought-provoking pictures to be seen in the Gallery. There are Marines, Still Lifes, Portraits, more pieces of sculpture and in the Little Gallery the room is filled with small pictures, all that capture the imagination with their bright and pastel colorings. The black and whites are also extremely well done, and are full of interest. A word description cannot do justice to the art that is to be found at the Gallery. One must see it to behold the beauty portrayed.

“FAIR HARVARD”

Author of this Nationally Known College Classic Gloucester Born and Bred -- May Have Been Written in Judith Sargent House

HOUSE OF THE GLOUCESTER SCIENTIFIC AND LITERARY ASSOCIATION

Home of a Gloucester shipmaster built about 1805. To this has been added in about equal dimension the Lucy Brown Annex and Auditorium alluded to in last issue.

The New York Times recently printed a special dispatch from Cambridge relative to the authorship of the hymn Fair Harvard, unquestionably the widest known and most moving college song—or perhaps hymn—of this country. Its rendition in group singing even when many non-Harvard men participate invariably move many to tears. It is doubtful whether any national song, God Save the King, or the Marsaillaise, sound the depths of college or national pride and patriotism more than Fair Harvard the music as in the case of the Marsaillaise adding much to its fervor. The forthcoming celebration of the Harvard Tercentenary has naturally brought this ode to the fore. The music was happily appropriated by Tom Moore in his poem, Believe Me If All These Enduring Young Charms. Music genealogists trace its origin back to Greek antiquity as they find in Anacreon the tune of the Star Spangled Banner—utilized previously as an old English drinking song.

The article in The Times in part—

All good Harvard men know the words of “Fair Harvard,” but not one in a thousand knows the name of the man who wrote the lines, largely because the author is not credited in any of the Harvard songbooks.

He was the Rev. Samuel Gilman, a Harvard graduate and a Unitarian minister at Charleston, S. C. His ode, called “the noblest college song yet written in America,” is sung at every Harvard festive occasion and will have especial significance at the tercentenary this Fall.

Tradition has it that Mr. Gilman wrote the ode under pressure. He had come back to Cambridge for the bicentennial with some reputation for his poetry. He was urged to write an ode, but is said to have pleaded lack of time. He was finally convinced, and one account states that he wrote it less than thirteen hours before it was to be sung at the morning exercises on Sept. 8.

Tradition also says that it was written in a second-floor room in the northwest corner of the Judge Samuel P. Fay house, now the administration building of Radcliffe College. Mrs. Fay and Mrs. Gilman were sisters.

Born in Gloucester, Mass., in 1791, Mr. Gilman was graduated in 1811 from Harvard where he won several honors and contributed articles and verses to the publications. He taught at the Boston Latin School and later at Harvard. In 1815 he composed the Harvard Phi Beta Kappa poem.

While teaching he preached in many England pulpits as a candidate for the ministry. In 1819 he went to Charleston, S. C., where he was asked to settle as pastor of the Second Independent Church, Unitarian. With his wife, the former Caroline Howard of Boston, he held the pastorate almost forty years.

He died in 1858 at the home of one of his daughters in Kingston, Mass., and was buried in Charleston, mourned by the community in the State.

But the more than tradition here it was written in what is known the Sargent-Murray-Gilman-Hough house on Middle Street, perhaps best known to the Judith Sargent house, preserved as a memorial to one of the Sargent family—through the instrumentality of its late pastor Rev. Dr. J. Powers and the late Winthrop House—one of the museum houses of England.

Young Samuel received his education in the public schools of the town and his college fitting at Atkinson Academy, graduating at Harvard in 1811. After graduation he engaged in teaching for a number of years then studied for the ministry, being ordained a minister in 1818, thus passing much of his formative days at his home in this city in which he passed his vacations during such was the case. Seven cities claim Homer dead as his birthplace. Several the honor of housing the Gloucester poet Gilman when inspired to write the ode to his Alma Mater which has brought him immortality.

BASS ROCKS OF YESTERYEAR

Bass Rocks In 1880. Sheet and Pillow Case Party. Masquerade Ball. First Game of Tennis Played at Bass Rocks and Probably on Cape Ann. Concert at the Summer Home of Judge Edgar J. Sherman Given to Help Defray the Expenses of Purchasing Tennis Outfit from Wright and Ditson In Boston.

By Silas Hibbard Ayer, M.D.
of Boston

THE summer of 1880 I spent at Bass Rocks. Together with my chum, George L. Davis of Chelsea, Mass., we slept in a tent erected along side of the cottage of Nathaniel Davis of Lowell, Mass., at the corner of Beach and Atlantic Roads. This cottage was one of four cottages built at Bass Rocks in 1873 and they were owned by a Mr. Norcross of Watertown, Mass., Horace Barker of Lowell, Mass., a Mr. Wright of Lowell, Mass., and the before mentioned Nathaniel Davis.

Judge Sherman built his summer home on the extreme point of Bass Rocks in 1875. The building of this cottage caused some indignation among these four original Bass Rockers for the reason that when they purchased their lots it was stipulated in the deed that there would never be any land sold east of Atlantic Road for building purposes.

However, on account of the failure of the land company and the acquirement of practically the whole of Bass Rocks by Henry Souther, Esq., these restrictions were removed and today many cottages exist between Atlantic Road and the creek that, according to agreement, never should have been built.

However, it was seven years after this time that I appeared on the scene and, together with my chum, we were not much interested in any little difference of opinion among the occupants of the several cottages that had sprung up during that time.

Personally, I was to enter Harvard Medical School that fall, and had, I remember, successfully passed my examination in Latin by Oliver Wendell Holmes, a physician but better known

JUDITH SARGENT HOUSE IN WHICH "FAIR HARVARD" WAS WRITTEN

Rev. Dr. Samuel Gilman, the author, is born in this house, passed his boyhood, academical and Harvard college years there after he became for some time a teacher at Harvard. His Gloucester background may be briefly stated:

He was descended on both sides from Gloucester families of standing. He is the son of Maj. Samuel Gilman and his mother was Abigail Somes, daughter of Benjamin Somes, a lineal descendant of Morris Somes who settled in Gloucester before 1642. His father was one of the locally famed tavern keepers and after the death of her husband his mother kept a store in Front now named Main Street. Maj. Gilman was for a number of years commander of the Gloucester Artillery. He died in May, 1898, and his funeral was one of the most imposing for many years in the town, being attended by the Third Regiment, the Gloucester Artillery and all the fire societies of the town.

his academical and college teaching years.

In those days the South sent many of the flower of its youth to Harvard to be educated and young Gilman, through college associations, made many warm friends among this representation, this acquaintance being the instrumentality through which he received a call to the ministry of the Second Unitarian church in the historic city of Charleston, S. C. His popularity and hold on his people is attested from the fact that he held the pastorate of the church for more than forty years. His death occurred at Kingston, Mass., while on a visit to the North and his body was taken to Charleston where it is interred in the cemetery hard by the church.

So the tradition is strong here that the words of Fair Harvard were written in one of the rooms of the Judith Sargent house, the residence of his parents. And the probability is strong that

LONG BEACH

Mrs. Elsie Boyd and daughter Ruth of Woburn have returned to the Beach for another season.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Markham and their children, Jackie and Maureen, have opened the "Breakers" for the summer. This family comes from Lowell.

Returning to the Beach for another season are Mrs. James E. Markham and children, James, Mary, Rita, Virginia and Paul of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGuire of Waltham and the children, Alice, Mildred, Esther and Walter, have returned to the Beach.

From East Walpole come Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Eisenhauer for their annual sojourn at the Beach. As usual, they occupy the Suri cottage.

Dr. and Mrs. Nash and family are occupying the cottage Peacehaven.

EAST GLOUCESTER

THE HAWTHORNE Inn tonight (Saturday, Aug. 15) celebrates its golden foundation anniversary with an appropriate program "The Gay Nineties" which, fortunately, some of the guests of yesteryear have in charge of presentation. Probably few hotels in this country have reflected the prestige and individuality of its founder, the late George O. Stacy, its fame being national and enduring.

So in keeping with the spirit of the occasion Mrs. Alice Fischer Harcourt has arranged a picturesque pageant beginning with a parade of guests in the costumes of that gay but decorous era above mentioned to the Casino. Then comes euchre and other diversions, a stage show of the time under the direction of William Harmer, a "Play of Fashion" written by Grace Filkins with Miss Filkins and Mrs. Edward D. Parsons in the leading parts. A feature is the bar—which the barkeeps Scott O'Connor, Joseph Rittenhouse and Caleb C. Magruder will enliven between potations with that plaintive ditty of other days "We Never Drink Behind the Bar" etcetera.

Assisting Mrs. Harcourt will be Mrs. Ernest Baldwin, Mds. St. John Butler, Miss Nina Chanut, Mrs. Joseph M. Cobb, Mrs. N. D. Drumme, Mrs. Harry Elger, Mrs. A. F. Hooper, Mrs. Erma Kuhn, Mrs. Robert W. Lewis, Mrs. Walter Richards, Mrs. Joseph Rittenhouse, Miss Stewart, Miss Vickery, Mrs. Hooper Wakefield and Mrs. W. D. Wheelwright.

And so say we all of us with Tiny Tim "Lord keep his memory green."

The fourth annual tennis tournament at the Hotel Rockaway opened yesterday with first round matches in men's and women's singles and men's doubles. In men's singles, Robert Voorhis, winner last year, will receive plenty of competition from Palmer Lloyd of Bass Rocks, William S. Packer Jr., Tom Slevak and Thomas Morrison of the Siamese Legation.

Favored pairs in the doubles are Dr. Warren Babson and Robert Voorhis and Packer Jr. and Kenneth Cooper.

A large gallery comprising Rockaway guests and summer residents are watching the matches.

The Summary

MEN'S SINGLES (First Round)

Thomas Phelps defeated J. E. Andrew, 6 - 0, 6 - 2.

Wick Jones defeated Robert Tarr, 6 - 4, 7 - 5. Jack Raymond defeated Bud Phillips, by default.

Ernest Cain defeated John Dunlop, 6 - 0, 6 - 3. Richard Brooks defeated Prescott Kettel, by default.

Robert Voorhis defeated Frank Brewer, 6 - 2, 6 - 1.

WOMEN'S SINGLES (First Round)

Katharine Burrill defeated Jane Schmidt, 6 - 1, 6 - 2.

Peggy Baker defeated Patricia Gavin, by default.

BASS ROCKS

Mr. and Mrs. Gorham Parsons tonight gave an informal party at the summer home in Haskell street Sunday evening to which a number of their friends were bidden in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Hibbard Ayer, the former one of the sons of Dr. Silas Hibbard Ayer, Bass Rockers of yesteryear. The four sons of Dr. Ayer have certainly gone far in the music world since their youthful days at Bass Rocks. As may be anticipated, the evening's diversion was distinctly musical, Mr. Hibbard Ayer with the operation of another former Hibbard Rocker, Mr. Welsh—recently returned from the West coast for a brief stay contributing at the piano some of the song hits of yesteryear and the piano with much feeling and aplomb accompanied by young Mr. Sargent on an electrical guitar.

A feature of the evening was the solo and ensemble violin playing that ever youthful dean of all Hibbard Rockers, Dr. Silas Hibbard Ayer, whose skill on this kind of instrument was signally demonstrated. Dr. Ayer is also a composer of merit as shown by playing of a piano duet by father and son of the "Sportsman's March," an original composition, evidenced.

An added feature was the singing to music of a recent composition by Dr. Ayer which we have the privilege of presenting and which bids fair to be the distinctive rallying song of Bass Rocks colony.

Thursday evening, August 6, Miss Prentiss entertained a party of friends at dinner at Bass Rocks Golf Club.

Miss Gilbert and Mrs. Elwell were hosts at the bridge luncheon held at the Bass Rocks Golf Club, Tuesday.

ANNISQUAM

THE PASSING of Harry H. Wiggin leaves a dominant figure in Annisquam life extending many years. He has left his impress on Annisquam yachting, succeeding, in a measure, as far as financing the yachting interest of the community is concerned, the late Commodore Luther S. Bent who sponsored the building of the first clubhouse and really made the place for the first time a summer yachting and community house which has proved a big factor in enlarging and upbuilding the social interests. In addition Mr. Wiggin became interested in a land development program at Rockholm which eventuated in the building of a number of fine residential houses and a consequent increase in the taxable valuation. He stood for many years as a constructive.

as a poet, and father of the late Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes of Boston, Washington, and Beverly Farms.

There were no trolley cars at that time and the only way to get over to Bass Rocks from the station at Gloucester was with Lem. Lane in his old stage coach. There were very few roads existent then. Bass Avenue was not there and to reach Bass Rocks one was obliged to climb the steep hill at East Gloucester up to the Bass Rocks House and old Mansion House, so called. The former of these was burned down in 1896 but the Mansion House still exists.

From the top of the hill, and passing the Bass Rocks House, one turns abruptly to the left on to what is now Beach Road. Going down this road one approached a point where Atlantic Road first began but to get on to this road it was necessary to open an old red gate, erected to keep the cows out, and after closing same, the road wound round to the Pebbly Beach House, destroyed by fire in 1884. On this site in 1896 was built the Hotel Moorland, the Hotel Thorwald being erected the following year.

But I fear that I have allowed myself to say too much about Bass Rocks itself for it was my intention to say just a bit about the children of Bass Rocks, now 56 years ago; what they did to amuse themselves, and perhaps, as interesting as anything to their parents, the cost of providing such amusements.

Bathing in the creek and in breakers on Little Good Harbor Beach was the chief sport of everybody. They would congregate every forenoon in bathing costumes that contained sufficient material to probably make a dozen or more costumes today. Possibly this is one of the reasons that many cloth mills have gone to the wall because so small an amount of goods now required to cover up the exposed anatomy today as compared to fifty years ago.

In addition to bathing the boys and girls played hare and hounds run across Little Good Harbor Beach, Little Beach to Rockport and back to Bass Rocks.

We had, of course, a baseball club used to go to the near end of Stratford Fort Park to play our games with the Gloucester boys. The girls would come along to root for the team. The word "fan" was not heard of in those days. No gloves, masks, shin guards or dome protectors were even thought of in those days. The catcher simply stood up and take his medicine, so to speak, without complaint even if he lost a tooth or two at times.

Dinner was always served at night and after an early supper the young people would all congregate on the "green" located at the corner of Atlantic and Nautilus Roads. Winthrop Sargent afterwards built his cottage on this point as also did Arthur Cox and alongside of the common.

Here the usual games were played, nearly everybody taking part, and as it began to grow dark all would sit down together and someone would tell their favorite ghost story, which, doubtless, was sufficient to keep some of the younger fry more or less awake during the night soon to follow.

I say "soon to follow" advisedly for promptly at nine o'clock the curfew horn would resound down from the Davis cottage, which meant just one thing and that was to come home at once.

How different things are today. Nine o'clock at night now means all

MILADY GOES SHOPPING

Gloucester, Mass.

Dear Eloise,

I suppose you are anxious to discover how I fared in regard to the dilemma I was left in last week. I finally, after much deliberation, came to a satisfactory solution—I went with both Jerry and Charles. It seemed as if the old saying "Two is company, three's a crowd" were prevailing. It held full sway while dining at the Stage Coach Inn, and continued all evening while dancing at the Rendez-Vous. It was too bad that there weren't two of me so I could be dancing with both of them to keep peace. However, I had a glorious time, and was not the least bit bothered by the slight tension indulged in by my two escorts.

Another bit of news—Mr. and Mrs. Smythe, Joan and her husband to you, are living in marital congeniality in their new home. Joan is most attractive—very petite and chic, with a small mouth and sparkling teeth, a slightly turned up nose, dark brown eyes, and shiny ebony hair falling gracefully about her head in waves and curls. Chris, her husband, is a very tall, well-built blonde with chiseled features and, of course, the usual big blue eyes prevalent in blondes. He has an extremely captivating personality.

They had come to Gloucester intending to spend the remainder of the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Marsh. You can imagine their surprise when they were escorted to their new home which was all ready for habitation. Naturally, they were thrilled to pieces about it all, and everything "suited them to a tee." Joan and I have become the best of pals, and she said she was anxious to go over town and look around the stores.

A few days later, Joan decided it was time for her to start her own house-keeping. There were no provisions in the house, so that was the first important thing to do. With my training, I was well able to advise her in her shopping. We went to the First National Store while Joan stocked up on supplies. They were featuring a sale on fresh vegetables, so we bought carrots, spinach, string beans, potatoes and some delicious ears of corn. Of course, we had to have meats, fruits and canned vegetables, too. We were worrying about conveying all these purchases in the roadster, but that was all settled for us—the clerk offered to have them delivered.

After making a short call at the Gloucester National and Cape Ann National Banks, we ambled on to the Gas and Electric company, the headquarters for electrical appliances. Because we wanted to equip the kitchen with the best of electrical labor-savers, we naturally went here. It is amazing and wonderful how the wonder of electricity has been adapted so as to contribute to the saving of labor in the kitchen, and you will really find some remarkable things at this store. We selected a beautiful electric iron, a very dear toaster for a bride and groom, and a thoroughly efficient percolator. They are pleasing to look at and guaranteed as to operation.

We stopped at the Co-operative Bank and Joan remarked on the pleasantries of the people working there. You know they are always on hand and willing to help one.

By the way, my rock garden is coming along famously and Tim has allowed me a little more space for planting seeds. So we went into L. E. Andrews to get them. We also bought some cute little gadgets for the lawn—a little figure of a girl watering and some cute little wooden animals.

Joan had to have a few light-weight dresses to work around the house in, and I suggested that we go to Mimi's. Their summer cottons were just the thing for this purpose. Eloise, if I don't stay out of Mimi's, I shall be listed among the paupers. I bought a skirt blouse, and shorts affair. They were made of a gayly colored print and were very stylish looking.

I thought it would be a good idea to go home before we spent any more money, but on the way home we made one more stop. You have probably heard that there are many wonderfully interesting places to see in Gloucester, one of these being the Gorton-Pew Fish Company, one of the largest fish processors in the world. Joan and I made a tour of inspection through there the other day, and it is surely worth one's time to accept the cordial invitation of the company to inspect its plant. If the value of fish as a food was more generally known, I think that the varied products of this company in their gay and modern packages would go out in added millions.

On reaching home, we found that the provisions had already been delivered. We sorted them out and packed them away in the Coolerator. The service man called last week to see that the Coolerator was in perfect working condition.

We planned a beach party and Joan made all the sandwiches and what goes with them. We all trooped off to Pebble Beach for the day and had one grand and glorious time. To make the party a little more successful, we invited Carol Robbins to go with Jerry, and, to me, she was the usual bore, but he seemed quite pleased. Maybe it will be another budding romance, at least we hope so.

Romance or no romance, I must be off to my secretarial duties, because fitting out a bride's home and doing Mr. Marsh's work are two different things, and I'm being paid for one and not the other.

Until later,

C. ANNE SHORE.

the seeds of disease service connected impregnated in their systems. With advanced years, these infirmities are beginning to manifest themselves. They believe it is the duty of the government to see that they are adequately cared for. Now having giving these facts and figures we are going to leave it to the reader to figure out their probable course in the future, always keeping in mind the old proverb that no one fights his own pocket book. In this city the organized Veteran combatant strength—not auxiliary—is 650. According to the Van Zandt formula of four it approximates 2500 out of a total of about 8000 votes cast. This ratio probably holds good throughout the land. And it is a conservative calculation.

In 1880 Miss Marion Osgood of Chelsea built a cottage adjacent to the common that was so far out on the rock that nearly everybody predicted that it would be washed away during the coming winter.

However, this cottage is still with us and was afterward purchased by Dr. Henry Broughton of Jamaica Plain. Since then the present owner has lived in it for some 20 years and has so remodelled its interior that I am told he has six sleeping chambers therein with a private bath for each room. Fifty-six years ago the only place for one to take a bath was down in the creek. Yes, times have changed!

It was in this house in 1880 that we held what we considered to be a grand masquerade ball. It was some affair and everybody was there in more or less startling costumes. Space will not allow me to say more regarding it. Preceding this a Sheet and Pillow case party was held at a cottage around the corner from that now occupied by Mrs. John McGaw Foster. This, too, was considered to be a great success.

Early in the summer of that year someone at one of our evening gath

ings on the common told of a new game called tennis. None of us had ever en or played the game. We were told at for $25 an outfit could be purchased at Wright & Ditson's in Boston, it where were we to get the twenty-five as the question. Change in the pockets of the boys in those days was not much, indeed, not much was required. All the games in which we indulged required little if any money. I doubt the whole crowd could have dug up the necessary twenty-five at that time. What to do? We all wanted to play the game but how? Finally, someone suggested that a concert be given to raise the necessary twenty-five. Lizzie Sherman, afterwards Mrs. Henry Souther, said that she thought her parents would allow the use of the large room in their cottage for the show. This cottage is now owned by Mr. Arthur M. Hess of New York City.

Again lack of space forbids my going into particulars regarding this concert. The program consisted of piano duets, violin solos, flute solos, and a one act farce. A satisfactory attendance brought in $35 and the game of tennis at Bass Rocks was assured. This, I believe, in addition to being the first game of tennis at Bass Rocks was probably the first tennis ever played on the whole North Shore. A court was laid out on the common, which though hardly level, was as fair for one as for the other. Tournaments were held and with the surplus ten dollars suitable prizes were secured. In scoring the boys began talking about "love fifteen and love thirty" with not too much emphasis, but the girls were soon yelling out all kinds of "love" double forte. Possibly they had had more experience in the use of this word. Who can tell?

As I read over what I have written I feel obliged to say that all the foregoing is merely a skeleton, so to speak, of a few of the ways that young people amused themselves in years long gone by. Still, it is my belief that they probably had just as much enjoyment as the younger element today with their late soirees, contract contests, cocktail parties and the like. What do you think?

OUTER CAPE ANN

Wednesday evening was a red letter night at the Magnolia Beach Club the annual corn roast being on the docket.

A large heap of driftwood covered with sea weed was fired in which had been placed corn and other viands which were cooked "to a turn" by the club chef. When the steaming mass was opened all "turned to" and ate al fresco—or what have you style. At any rate a good feed was had by all.

After justice had been done this Lucullan, repast the assemblage repaired to the clubhouse where dancing completed the evening's program. The hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. John Zinsser and Mrs. Samuel Stevens. The party included about 60 guests and friends.

Entertaining at Luncheon at the Magnolia Beach Club this week were: Mrs. P. Hill, party of three; Miss Eleanor Jones, party of four; Mrs. W. McPherson, party of two; Mrs. W. G. Reeter, party of five; Mrs. M. S. Simpkins Jr., party of four; and Miss Pat Trenor, party of two.

BEACH CLUB TENNIS

Magnolia, August 11

In the Magnolia Beach Club tennis tourney Tuesday, Elise Smithwick and Catherine O'Connell reached the finals in senior girls' singles. The outstanding match in the senior boys' singles was between Wicks Jones and D. Suriyong. Jones won in three sets, all closely contested.

In the junior boys' singles, John Zinsser Jr., will meet Leonard Wright in the final. Wright won easily but Zinsser had stiff opposition from Ted Bullard in the semi-final.

CLAY'S CLIPPER WINNER OF EASTERN POINT RACE

GLOUCESTER, Aug. 12—Only one class, the Cape Cod Knock-abouts, finished in the Eastern Point Yacht Club midweek racing this afternoon. Jack Clay's Clipper was the winner.

The larger boats started on the outside course, but heavy fog shut in and no one was able to finish within the limit. The summary:

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

Attention is called to the following provisions of an ordinance governing Gloucester Harbor. Sec. 44(a).

POWER BOATS — MUFFLERS

(a) Power driven boats shall not exceed a speed of ten (10) miles per hour in the inner harbor, and for the purposes of determining what is the inner harbor, same shall comprise all the waters of Gloucester harbor lying northeasterly of an imaginary line extending from the spindle standing southwesterly of the Tarr & Wonsen copper paint factory directly across to the Fort Wharf, or by whatever name said wharf may be called.

(b) Boats with internal combustion engines shall be provided and equipped with a muffler or underwater exhaust of a type or types approved by and used in conformity with the rules and regulations authorized by the Commissioner of Public Safety, so that the noise of the same shall not cause unreasonable annoyance to persons in the vicinity of said boats.

LOBSTER POTS PROHIBITED

(c) Lobster or fish pots and similar contrivances attached to the surface with a rope and buoy floating on the surface, shall not be set, established, or maintained in the channel of Annisquam River, nor in the channels of the principal arms thereof, nor in the regularly used fairways in Gloucester harbor and waters adjacent thereto, nor within the courses laid out for races maintained by the Eastern Point Yacht Club and the Annisquam Yacht Club, nor anywhere else so as to unreasonably restrict the free use and navigation of said waters, unless a permit in writing is issued by the State Department of Public Works.

Any violation of this section shall be punished by a fine of Twenty Dollars ($20) for each offence.

ALLEN F. GRANT, Clerk,
A true copy. Attest:
ALLEN F. GRANT, City Clerk.

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

In the year nineteen hundred and thirty-two,

AN ORDINANCE

providing for certain ISOLATED "STOP" signs.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

SECTION 1—Every driver of a vehicle, bus or other conveyance, approaching an intersecting way at which there exists facing him, an official sign, authorized by this Municipal Council, said sign having apart from this regulation, the written approval of the Department of Public Works of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and bearing the word "STOP" shall before entering and proceeding through the intersection, bring such vehicle, bus or other conveyance to a complete STOP at such line as may be clearly marked, or, if there is no line so marked, at a place between the said sign and the line of the street intersection.

In the case of a line of two or more vehicles approaching such "STOP" sign, the drivers of the second and third vehicles in any group shall not be required to stop more than once at said designated line or place or in the immediate vicinity.

This ordinance shall not apply when the traffic is otherwise directed by a police officer or by other lawful traffic regulating signal or device.

SECTION 2—In accordance with the foregoing, the Municipal Council hereby authorize the erect and maintenance of an official "STOP" sign or "stop" signs as to face:

- 1—North and southbound drivers on Magnolia avenue at West avenue.
- 2—Northbound drivers on Centennial avenue at Washington.
- 3—Southbound drivers on Centennial avenue at Western avenue.
- 4—Southbound drivers on Prospect street at Main street.

SECTION 3—Any persons found guilty of violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars ($20.00) for each offence.

SECTION 4—All acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 5—This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after the expiration of (10) days from the date of final passage.

In Municipal Council, April 1932.

Passed first and second readings and to be enrolled.

ALLEN F. GRANT, City Clerk
In Municipal Council, April 1932, Passed to be ordained.

THE OLD TIME YANKEE FISHERMAN
READING THE NEWS

This is a photo cut of Capt. Stanwood of the Riverdale-Annisquam section, a well known master mariner of the days when the mackerel and codfishing fleet caught their fares by hook and line along the New England coast and in the North Bay (Bay Chaleur.) This type of nature's fishermen disappeared more than 30 years ago. From this class, a descendent of the early settlers, came the men who won victories on sea and land in the wars which expelled the French from North America and achieved Independence in the Revolution. A Gloucester tourist in the Gaspé country recently found this postcard picture on sale labeled

POINTS OF INTEREST

Gloucester, Cape Ann — First white man to visit its shores was Thorwald in 1004. Harbor called by Norsemen "Krossanes." Gosnold landed here in 1602 and found the place had been used as a base by Portuguese fishermen. In 1605 Champlain sailed by the Cape but did not land. The next year, September 1606, he entered the harbor which he named Le Beauport and made a map of it. Attacked by 200 Indians and sailed away the next day. In 1614 Capt. John Smith named it Cape Ann after Anne of Denmark, mother of King Charles I. First permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder. Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern Point. Dog Bar breakwater extends from a half mile long, completed in 1904 and extends from this point. On Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ram-

parts" occupies site of Fort Independence.

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the Cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenswood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from Fresh Water Cove or the so-called Old Salem road, Western avenue. Mason Walton's cabin, "Hermit of Bond's Hill," on this road. Well worth frequenting.

Beacon or Governor's Hill, near center of city, from Washington street. Small reservation at top from which a fine view may be obtained.

Dogtown Commons, site of deserted Revolutionary settlement. Reached from Gee avenue, Riverdale. Fine example of boulder deposits of glacial period. "Whale's Jaw," best known of these boulders, at edge of common. Rocking stone, etc., now taken over by the city as a water shed.

Wharves skirting the water front, interesting as affording "close-up" of fish curing, etc.

Babson House, opposite Ellery House, erected by Col. John Low about 1745. Old slave pens in attic.

Main street, first known as Fore, afterwards as Front street. Principal business avenue. Laid out 1642. Middle street, paralleling Main, contains many old colonial houses and the Judith Sargent house, the grounds of which, originally extending to Main street have been restored.

On Middle street are the First Parish (Unitarian) Church, oldest in Gloucester; Independent Christian (Universalist) first Universalist society in America, church edifice erected 1805; St. John's Episcopal Church, Trinity Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Sawyer Free Library and Reading Room, Middle street, adjoining Unitarian church. Interior fine specimen of colonial woodwork. Originally home of Thomas Sanders, merchant.

Old Town Hall Square, at junction of Middle and Washington streets. Beautiful American Legion Memorial building and monument on which was placed statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughn Hyatt.

Fort Point, at western side of inner harbor, down Commercial street from Main, fortified in 1743. Now Italian quarter and rendezvous of fishermen of that nationality.

Drives around the Cape: Up Washington street, through Riverdale, past Annisquam, Bay View, Lanesville into Pigeon Cove, Rockport and completing the circuit to Gloucester. Almost a continuous ocean view, which was completed when the Bass Rocks-Land's End stretch was completed.

Beaches: Little Good Harbor and Long Beaches, between Bass Rocks and Land's End, Rockport. Wingarsheek Beach, West Gloucester, largest on Cape, two miles long, 600 feet deep at low tide; reached from Essex avenue, West Gloucester, down Concord street.

Quarries at Bay View and Pigeon Cove, among largest in country, near main highway.

Blyman canal, first cut in 1642 by Rev. Richard Blyman, at Western entrance of city.

Drives: "Little Heater," "Dark Hole" at West Gloucester.

Old Salem road, first highway from the town, blazed out in 1628, when part of the settlers went to Salem. Down Hesperus avenue (discontinued in 1892) to Salem. Name erroneously applied to Old Pest House road, leading through Ravenswood park from Western ave.

"For this is the wise God's guiding
When the winds have broken the rose
When gales from the north are gliding
And the gates of summer close—
That the Lords of the Land go riding
And the horn on the upland blows."

—From "Scattered Scarlet"
by Will H. Ogilvie.

SHALL WE LICENSE GAMBLING?

THE MANIA for gambling was never greater than at the present time. That is plainly evident. Inborn in the human race is the compelling urge to drink liquor and take a chance. Centuries ago it was recognized that the only way to regulate the liquor traffic—to a degree—was to license it and incidentally secure revenue for governmental purposes.

Perhaps all progress is based on the desire to take a chance which, in its last analysis, is gambling in its various forms. A man sets out in business. He takes a chance as to whether or not he will succeed. The Norsemen, Columbus and the early pioneer navigators all took a long chance when they set out on uncharted seas on their voyages of discovery. Mingled with this urge is the desire for adventure. The men who crossed the great American desert in the covered wagon, the men and women who pioneered the ocean and opened up the continent to civilization of the white men, who dared the perils of the great American desert in the covered wagon, who sailed in schooners from this port in '49 to the Golden Gate, all gambled their lives against chance and adventure and the race progressed.

From the earliest time we learn of the gambling instinct which balked at nothing. The Roman soldiers—so it is written—drew lots for the garments of the Master, and so on all through the ages.

In this country gambling has been more or less taboo although the straight-laced Puritans tolerated the practice. Lotteries were run to aid Harvard and in our own town in the early 1800's a road lottery provided a fund for a road improvement from the town to Freshwater Cove.

England, the most law-abiding country on the globe, has failed to cope with the problem and stands today the greatest gambling country on the globe. Peer and peasant alike go broke wagering their last penny on the chances of the Derby, Grand National and other races. The greatest legalized and systematized gambling enterprise in existence is Lloyds which will lay down its bet with you for anything, from the chance that your wife will give birth to twins to the result of the presidential election. The great insurance companies is another example. They bet you so much that you will or will not live up to a certain period or that your house or business will not be destroyed by fire.

But to get to our pressing present problem. Millions of dollars are annually sent to Ireland in the Irish sweepstakes based on the result of the great English horse racing events. Hundreds of thousands are sent into Canada into fake lottery enterprises. Bursting its bonds it has come out publicly with Beano which has enmeshed the nation—perhaps the greatest racketeering gambling enterprise in the history of the country, strongly entrenched. In our city some ten such open establishments, four run under the auspices of fraternal organizations, all classes from the Brown men composed of a certain element of native stock to the Bears and Beavers and Knights of Boondoggles defying all efforts of the law to prevent their operation.

This being the case there is a growing public sentiment that the time has come to keep some of this money that is sent abroad to feather the nests of foreign enterprises, in this country. And why not? Why may not the government of nation, state and municipality step in and regulate in a measure this evil—if such it may be termed? Why not the state set up the machinery of a Grand National or a Derby or whatever event it may elect, run off the enterprise in public here and keep the entire proceeds for public purposes, especially welfare and old age pensions or some needed improvement? Let the state go into the game and keep the entire take instead of licensing a private company which will give an insignificant stipend to "charity." For it is a well known fact that about a third of welfare cash in the various communities goes into

"THE PRINCESS COMES ACROSS"

"The King Steps Out," and "The Bride Walks Out" in the picture of 1935 - 1936.

"One Rainy Afternoon" I had a telephone call from "Rose Marie" to tell me she would bring her knitting, to spend the afternoon. I knew she had a great "Desire" to talk over the matters that were afloat about our friend "Poppy," known as "The Meek Widow."

When "Mr. Deeds Comes To Town" he is the "Informer" of what is going on. His latest news is that Poppy with her "Big, Brown Eyes" has cavorted "Anthony Adverse." He heard "The Lady Consents" and they say she will be going on the "Florida Special" for a honeymoon, saying nothing to anyone. Sometimes "Brides Are Laid Out." Perhaps "It's Love Again" but I hope they "Don't Gamble With Love."

I recall some of her former love affairs, one especially comes to my mind. It was during the winter she spent in "San Francisco" with "Captain J. A. Jary" and his daughter, "Gentle Julia." He is "Everybody's Old Man" and introduced Poppy to "Champagne Charlie," a "Tough Guy" and a "Dangerous" man.

"His Family Tree" wasn't much to boast of. He had been a "Wanderer In The Wastelands." "Every Saturday Night" he took her to "The Dancing Pirate." No "Early To Bed" for them.

Julia did everything she could to persuade Poppy to give him up and at last she succeeded. Julia was a "Small-Town Girl" and had every appearance of having led a "Cloistered existence" in "The Age of Innocence" but she was "Nobody's Fool" and persistent efforts saved Poppy from a life of "Human Bondage" and Champagne soon took his place among "Forgotten Faces."

SONG OF CONTENTMENT

By ALEXANDER GARFIELD TUPPER

Ed. Note—Are we who are vacationing on this beautiful North Shore, where Nature offers us the wooded roadways, fields bright with blossoms and hills fresh and green, content with our being here? The Gloucester Poet draws a vivid picture of contentment, while walking down Fifth avenue in New York City, when Spring was awakening. A cricket was singing between two tall buildings—a rare occurrence in a big city like New York. The writer was inspired, with a bit of philosophy.

One day in May, on Fifth Avenue,
When the city dreamed of country lanes;
I stopped to hear a cricket's song
That came from between two high grey walls—
Amid confusion of the throng—
The sounds of horns and drilling cranes!
A cricket's song on Fifth Avenue, Near two blades of grass and two feet of space—
O, where did you come from, you minstrel-elf,
Astray from your kin, in a spot remote?

Happy you are in your pent-up place,
Singing there by your tiny self!
I paused at length on Fifth Avenue
To hear a cricket's happy song
Near two blades of grass and two high grey walls—
And I wondered if one of millions heard,
In that busy, bustling, heedless throng;
And his song was but a single word,
'Neath a tiny strip of Heaven's blue,
Two blades of grass and a balmy air;
I understood what his chirping meant—
It was only a word, but so strangely true—
He chirped content, content, content!

In co-operation with this unique plan, on the reverse of each panel is the artist's signed statement of the colors he selected from this palette, and technical data which will be of infinite value, in conjunction with period examinations which will be made to supplement these records, to artists, schools and institutions interested in the perpetuity of paintings.

THE SCHOONER "ELIZABETH HOWARD" THE "WHITE LADYE" OF THE FISHING FLEET

Winner of the Col. John Wing Prentiss Cup and second place in the Tercentenary Anniversary Fisherman's Race. Struck on Porter's island, N.S., Nov. 27 1923, and was a total loss. Won second place by 50 seconds, the schooner "Henry Ford" being the winner. Sailed on that occasion by Ben Pine (insert). The writer has seen and sailed in them all from the time of the first Fisherman's race Fast Day, 1887, and to his mind she was the fastest and most representative Gloucester fishing schooner ever launched. Easily five minutes speedier than when sailed on this occasion. A Photograph and not a painting.

What is considered by far the most important land title controversy along the Northern New England seaboard—a controversy which has been in the mulling for the past 15 years—is now apparently bound for a definite decision in the courts.

It involves title to the uplands and all the Little Good Harbor Beach to low-water mark, this beach, as is well known, being one of the finest along the North Atlantic shore.

For more than 250 years it remained so valueless that no one claimed title to it. Early in the town's history—Gloucester being then all Cape Ann—the wooded land from the tip end of Eastern Point to what is known as Cape Hedge, in Rockport, was set off as common land for wood-cutting. In those days a good business was done in supplying Boston with firewood—no trees growing on what is now Boston territory. So the men of Gloucester fished in the Summer and in the Fall took their cured fish by boat to Virginia and the South and bartered it for the goods of that section. In the Winter they cut this wood and let it dry. The next Fall, after returning from the South, they loaded their wood on their fishing boats and disposed of it in Boston. So that's the history of it.

Inquiry at the assessors' office reveals the fact that no one assumed ownership until 1901 when several persons claimed title and desired to pay taxes and were accommodated by the assessors. The land then had begun to assume a value.

About 1920 the Souther Land Trust claimed title which was resisted by the city. Proceedings were instituted by the trust in the Land Court but the late city engineer, John H. Griffin, had the case thoroughly prepared. the day of the trial no one appeared in behalf of the petitioners except ask for further time for preparation and the case never came to trial apparently was dropped.

Several years before that, however a question came up as to whether there was any right of public way the beach and the case was taken the Land Court, Judge Davis decided that the records showed that there was such a way but so obscurely defined that he could not indicate the exact locality. Accordingly in handing down his decree he left it to the city to decide. The logical approach being at the foot of Witham street the city decreed that this road was an extension of Witham street and so laid it out and it has been used as such the past 20 years without protest.

Recently the Shepherd property

land extending seaward from northern avenue, has come into possession of George W. Nugent, who claims the beach is his to low-water mark and he proceeded to maintain title. He gave legal notice to the city last year not to restore the bridge over the little salt water creek which runs in on the western end at low tide and the city met the challenge aggressively by ordering the bridge dismantled and established as a part of the public highway to the beach and it has been maintained as such as in the past.

Last year the city in order to correct abuses which had arisen, mainly in the coming of outsiders, established restrictive parking rules, involving a fee from outsiders the object being to keep out what was termed an undesirable element. This year it has again resumed practice which it is asserted has worked well as a law and order remedial agency on the beach. When Mr. Nugent made a move in through his counsel, William G. Clark, and sought an injunction on two points, first that the city be restrained from imposing any parking rules and secondly restrained from allowing sand to be removed from the beach.

The decision handed down by Judge Smith of the Land Court is considered a victory for the city by Solicitor Carleton Wonson who says the city in contention of the city empowerment to maintain parking laws is essentially its whole case. As to taking sand he said the city was not essentially interested in that phase of the matter at the present time.

PRESENT AND PAST—A GRAHAM BELL

Gilbert Tucker Margeson, noted marine painter, has in his possession a picture which he values highly. This picture was written by Alexander Graham Bell and is one of appreciation. It follows:

Pigeon Cove,
Aug. 19, 1881.

My dear sir:

I must thank you very sincerely for all the trouble you have taken with the picture of our little child. The picture is, I think, as satisfactory a one as could be made under the circumstances.

Please let me know how much we are in your debt—and oblige,

Yours very sincerely,
Alexander Graham Bell.

The story surrounding this letter is most interesting.

At that time, Mr. Margeson was only a student of painting, doing only work that brought no return. Mr. Bell heard of him and sent his servant to ask him to paint the portrait of his child. Believing himself incapable, he refused for that reason. A short time later Mr. Bell rode to the painter's home with a span of horses. He appeared very prosperous. He bent his powers of persuasion upon Mr. Margeson and finally convinced him that he should undertake the assignment.

The artist then painted the picture under a great deal of difficulty. The tragedy of this assignment was that the child was dead, had been dead when born. This was Mr. Margeson's first work for remuneration. At that time Mr. Bell would undoubtedly have given the artist telephone stocks in appreciation.

Mr. Margeson is still a very active painter and very well known. His work is exhibited at his Stone Studio on Atlantic avenue, Rockport.

NORTH SHORE PARTIES

A number of dinners are being given preceding the costume dance next Saturday evening, Aug. 22, at the Essex County Club, and one of the largest will be that at which Miss Nancy Leiter is entertaining several friends from Washington, D. C., as well as many along the North Shore.

Among the guests will be Miss Anne Ayer, Miss Hope Distler, Miss Nancy Cochrane, Miss Frances Sortwell, Miss Elizabeth McKean, Miss Marion McKean, Miss Elise and Miss Anne Sortwell, Miss Alice Burrage, Miss Virginia Ward and Miss Eleanor Swift.

The guests from Washington will include Miss Margot Haynes, Miss Emily Davis, Miss Angelica Lloyd, Edward B. McLean, Demarest Lloyd, Jr., and Stephen Elkins. Among the young men from about the Shore invited are Frederick Ayer, Jr., Paul Fitzpatrick Fox and Gerald Gleason Fox; George Clements, Peter Langmaid, Francis Burrage Chalifoux and George von L. Meyer, Jr.

Others will be Edward Hyde Cox, Eliot Bacon, Henry Russell, Allen Jenkins, C. Carson Febiger 2d, Henry Fuller, John Augustus Griswold and William and John Wood.

Miss Kate Talbot and her brother, C. Meredith Talbot, will also be hosts at dinner that evening, at the Magnolia house, "Normandie" of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max L. Talbot.

Farewell Party

As they are shortly to move their Lares and Penates to the United States embassy in Rome, the newly appointed Ambassador to Italy, and Mrs. William Phillips will entertain a large number of old friends at their Beverly house, "Highover," on Monday evening, Sept. 7, in a gesture of farewell for an indefinite period of time. Friends of their daughter, Miss Beatrice Phillips, and their sons, Drayton and William Phillips, Jr., will also be there as most of the family will accompany their parents abroad shortly afterwards, though, in all probability the younger members, Christopher, Miss Anne and Miss Caroline Phillips, will remain in this country at school, visiting in Italy during their vacations.

On to Newport

Miss Natalie Folsom is leaving on Tuesday to spend several days in Newport with Miss Adelaide Whitehouse and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Fitz Hugh Whitehouse, at "Stone Villa." Miss Whitehouse won the contest run in Newport during most of July, for the prettiest girl, the results having been read out at the fair there last week.

TO A LITTLE DOG

You're such a helpless little chap,
Not even worth your keep;
And yet you've planted in my heart
A love that's strong and deep.

A little bunch of hair and burrs,
You have no pedigree;
I don't know why you've come to mean
So very much to me.

You're not the sort to rescue me
If I were nearly drowned.
You wouldn't bark a warning word
If smoke or flames you found.

You can not drive away the tramps
That to our door-yard roam.
You don't know how to tend the cows,
Nor drive the chickens home.

But let me take your tangled paw,
And I'll softly croon to you,
"I don't know why I love you,
But I do-o-oo!"

EASTERN POINT

A picturesque sight on the break-water line—although some of our pacifist friends may not agree—were the two battle cruisers of our far-flung navy. They are of the latest type of naval construction, spoon-bowed, and are an improvement over former hull designs inasmuch as the freeboard is perceptibly lowered thereby affording a much lessened target to the enemy. Conspicuous is the absence of service World War service stripes on the crew, many of whom are westerners, although some with two hash marks were seen, reminding service men that more than eighteen years have passed since the close of the war and that some of these young men may not have been born at the opening of that great cataclysm. Mostly a high-grade type of men before the mast—high school or early college men. I noted a chief boatswain—really the keystone man of the ship in the old days—men who knew marline-spike seamanship and practical navigation and seamanship down to the last dot—who from his pale student-like face might have been an incipient college professor—not the horny-handed hard-boiled salt who had sailed the seven-seas the idol of the newly-taken on boys on their first cruise, who with an art gallery of beauties and patriotic emblems adorning his breast with a quid of tobacco bulging out the cheek instructed the admiring youths in the intricacies of knots and rope fancy work, etcetera. When a skipper in the navy had this type of man aboard he felt safe for he was assured that everything was ship-shape and Bristol fash-

EAST GLOUCESTER

Festivity at the Casino

A costume party of the Gay Nineties was given at the Hawthorne Inn Casino last Saturday night, August 15 in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the Inn. Many beautiful costumes were worn by the old guests of the Inn. Among them, there was a gown worn at President McKinley's Inaugural Ball, and it was worn at this affair by Mrs. R. C. Taylor of New York. She also wore the gown on the former occasion. Mrs. Charles E. Claggett of Louisville, Kentucky, wore a gown that was also worn by her mother at the ball given for the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia at Louisville. Mrs. Arthur Carpenter wore a gown of her mothers, that was also worn in the Gay Nineties. Mrs. William Wheelwright and Mrs. Robert Lewis dressed as the White Sisters in shirtwaist costumes of the period.

There was a Euchre tournament during the evening. There were also many stage sketches of the Gay Nineties' period and many old-fashioned songs of that period were sung. There were about four hundred people in attendance, who all listened to Mayor Friend as he made the opening address. Mrs. Harry Elger won first prize for the longest consecutive attendance at the Inn. She has returned annually for the last thirty-eight years.

Miss Mona Gill of Washington, D. C. was the happy recipient of the first prize at the Tuesday bridge party at the Hotel Rockaway. Although the season is drawing to a close, the Hotel Rockaway is still in full swing, keeping its guests entertained and happy. Bridge parties are flourishing, tennis playing is very popular and of course the Saturday evening dances are always "tops." Much credit is given to Mr. and Mrs. William A. Publicover, proprietors of the Hotel Rockaway, for their successful ability in pleasing their guests.

Carroll Lewis Maxcy, Morris Professor of Rhetoric, emeritus at Williams College, died early Sunday morning, August 9, at his home. He was 71. Prof. Maxcy was a graduate of Williams in 1887 and a member of its faculty for thirty-seven years. Born in Norristown, Pa., Mr. Maxcy entered Williams in 1883, becoming principal of Troy Academy after graduation. In 1895 he married Miss Louise Hawley of Troy, N. Y. In 1898 he was appointed Professor of English at Williams and three years later Morris Professor. He was a summer resident of Gloucester for several years, making his home at the Fairview. His passing will be regretted by all who knew him. He is survived by his widow.

BASS ROCKS

Bass Rocks the Place for Me

By Dr. Silas Hibbard Ayer

I've travelled east,
I've travelled west,
I've lived in many a clime.
But, east or west,
The place that's best
Is right here ev'ry time.

The beach, the waves,
The misbehaves,
The strollers on the sand;
The boys and girls
Deprived of curls,
Parade, yes, hand in hand.

And tennis, too,
For me and you;
My! How the things do hum!
As up the beach,
With some young peach,
Cavorts the smiling GUM.

Your hand he shakes
Until it quakes,
And then most au-di-blee,
He stops and yells Midst ocean swells,
BASS ROCKS' THE PLACE
FOR ME.

Chorus

Bass Rocks' the place for me;
I know you'll all agree;
We congregate
Off times 'till late,
'Tis there we are scot free.
We rise, we bathe,
We smoke, we shave,
We're happy as can be.
Yes, midst the rocks
With gorgeous frocks,
FOR ME.

ANNISQUAM

The Annual Fair of Annisquam held Tuesday, Aug. 12, at the Village was unusually successful, the summer colonists coming out in large numbers to assist in the object for which the fair was held, namely, the fund for the new church. The flower display, the newly designed linens, the candy cake table and the touch of humor added in the grab box all contributed to the gaiety of the occasion. Much credit for the success of the afternoon was given Mrs. Walter E. Olson, chairwoman of the general committee and her assistants, Mrs. Almon Davis in charge of the Sewing Bee table; Mrs. Charles Cunningham the Sewing Circle; Mrs. William H. MILADY GOES SHOPPING

Gloucester, Mass.

Dear Eloise,

Mrs. Marsh has done it again! While driving over town the other day, she took it into her head to go "sailing" up a one-way street (the wrong way). You can imagine the consequences. She was proceeding along very smoothly when she met in a collision with a car coming down. No one was seriously injured, but for a time we thought Mrs. Marsh would be spending a few days in jail. However, she was saved from this ill fate by Mr. Marsh's influence.

Joan and I have been doing a little bartering—Joan went into the Gas and Electric Co. and saw an electric ironer which she thought she'd like to have. She had already bought an electric iron, so I purchased it from her for my own use. With Joan's Ironer, ironing ceases to be drudgery—becomes a relaxation. She sits comfortably in her chair, guides the clothes effortlessly—and this modern Ironer does all the work. It's portable—can be rolled into any room.

For the past few days I have been staying at Joan's house helping her to get started with her housekeeping. She has become quite efficient in taking care of her Coolerator. She is very particular about the arrangement of food in it (I guess the gossipers must have been wrong—she is nothing like her mother). Just at present Joan is planning an elaborate housewarming for tomorrow evening. She is exceptionally clever at planning this sort of thing. It's going to be quite an affair—of course, at first the guests will inspect the house. After that, Joan has decided to serve a Barbecue Steak Dinner, and then the evening will be reserved for entertainment. Joan and I have "hatched up" between us a most unique Treasure Hunt. We have spent the entire afternoon in planting the clues which will take the party around the Cape all in vain, for the treasure will be hidden right near the house they started from. Now, Eloise, I think I'll save the rest of the letter until after tomorrow evening, because I know you'll be anxious to hear all about the party.

* * * * *

I'm so excited, I don't know where to begin! Yesterday morning we went to the First National Store to buy the edibles for the big affair. Eloise, I thought Joan was going to buy about everything in the store.

Then we dashed down to Mimi's to buy a dinner gown—You know, we wanted to look our loveliest! Joan's was a black net with a brilliantly flowered jacket. I couldn't wear anything so dark as that, so I bought a mousseline de soie dress in a pastel shade of green.

Our next mad dash was to L. E. Andrews to get some cocktail glasses. Joan didn't have enough, and as luck would have it, we found another set exactly like the last one we bought—so everything matched beautifully. (We have borrowed Charles' set for the evening.)

By this time we were "flat broke," so we rushed to the banks, I to the Gloucester National Bank and Joan to the Cape Ann National Bank. When we came out of the banks, we found we wouldn't have time to prepare lunch as we had so much else to do. To remedy this, Joan called Chris and suggested that he and Charles come over and take us to lunch. Fifteen minutes later we met them in front of Stage Coach Inn. The poor dears were about famished waiting for us to come home with lunch. Consequently, when we met them they were a bit peeved, but lunch cheered them and everyone was satisfied again.

Chris and Charles had not planned anything for the afternoon. Joan and I certainly didn't want them around, because you know what men are when one is busy! Joan told them about her delightful tour of inspection at Gorton's. We finally convinced them to go—so we were rid of them for the afternoon.

Joan had to arrange bouquets, furniture, and dust up a bit. But I just had to remember that I was a private secretary, and went to attend to Mr. Marsh's affairs. I had to write a letter to the Gloucester Co-operative Bank, get Hornblower & Weeks on the phone for Mr. Marsh, and then answer some more personal letters for him. I completed all this just in time to dress for the party.

And now for the party!—the guests thought the house just too divine, and dinner proved to be just as nice. The Treasure Hunt was a barrel of fun. There were four persons in each car, and five cars in all. Of course, Joan and I could not participate in the hunt as we knew where the things were hidden. But we had a grand time watching the others trying to straighten out their clues. Our trip around the Cape took us past the Rendez-Vous. Charles and I and the couple we were with stopped to have a few dances—you know how a few leads to many. We ended up by spending a great part of the evening there. When we finally reached home, the rest were already there waiting patiently for us. So we explained our absence (to cover up our time at the Rendez-Vous) telling we unfortunately had a flat tire. We questioned the guests as to who had won the treasure—of all things—it was Carol Robbins, and imagine her chagrin when she received a nice basket of vegetables. Oh, Eloise, it was a wonderful evening. As Charles and I walked over to the house, he remarked on the nice time he had had, and when I smiled in agreement, he thoughtfully gazed into my eyes, and asked me if buying lottery tickets and chances on the horse races.

This thing should be met squarely face to face. It cannot be suppressed any more than the tides may be made static. Prohibitory laws against them are as King Canute sitting on his throne at low water mark and bid the incoming flood to stay its course. Only one exception to this, that old chap who we are told bade the sun to stay set in the heavens—believe it or not Bob Ripley.

As one of our presidents phrased it: "It's a condition and not a theory that confronts us." All such problems must be compromised with.

A few days ago it was published in a Boston daily that the official take—betting at horse (pari-mutuels) and dog racing courses in this state aggregated $44,456,093, some $2,000,000 of which went to state charities—old age pensions and the like we presume. Think of that, nearly $43,000,000 to the private promoters—minus what went to the minority who guessed right on the results—let us say—and we are well within bounds—that at least $30,000,000 went to a group of insiders and but $2,000,000 to charity.

Now if this entire amount were turned over to welfare, state, nation and city would be relieved of an onerous burden. Like it or not this matter must be faced in a practical common-sense manner. We believe it will be, the only doubt being that a strong effort will be made to vest the enterprise in a private corporation. Undoubtedly there will be graft if such regulation is decreed but it would be nothing as compared to the present ratio of thirty million to two million. The Shore has no brief for gambling. It is unalterably and absolutely opposed to it on principle. But you might as well attempt to dam the Mississippi or Amazon at their mouths. It's a suckers' game, but the name of Barnum—who was eternally right—will go ringing down the ages in his appraisal that one is born every minute. And it pervades all classes.

The most popular literature at present is tipster sheets from the stock market down to the crap game. Years ago an enterprising individual opened a stock tipster sheet advertising in the "Evening Sun." He had two offices—one issued "bull" predictions, the other "bear" prognostications. Apparently two different crowds. "Wagner Warns" was the bear topline while the bullish ad predicted an upturn. Thus the adventurer, like the darkey's fish trap with mouths set up and down stream, "caught 'em comin' and gwine." Gloucester turned out the big glorified tipster of the cocaine decade. Literally millions in it.

ALLEGRA IS WINNER IN THE TRIANGLE CL

ROCKPORT, Aug. 15—A southwest wind prevailed at Sar Bay this afternoon, but as it makes for under a lee condition the water was comparatively smooth. In the Triangles the Allegra had the situation in fair control from the getaway. It was the same story in the Sandy Bay Class with Jolo in the stellar role. The summary:

ANNISQUAM—AUG. 15 AND

Week-end racing conditions Annisquam were ideal. Saturday saw some rough water sailing in stiff west northwest breeze, giving the heavy weather boats the opportunity they have been waiting for, while yesterday a moderate northwest wind and smooth water were on tap.

For a time on Saturday it looked as if the judges might call the race off and several of the skippers thought such to be the fact, including Capt. Paul Woodbury of the Flamingo who was caught napping and lost at least three minutes of the start which probably cost him the race.

Yesterday's course was triangular, Plum Cove, outer mark at home for the birds. Plum Cove inner mark and home for the fish. In the bird class at Plum Cove Nordie and Wren rounded practically on even terms. On the beach Wren and Flamingo stood out the bay to port while the rest went to starboard. When the two groups converged, Wren and Flamingo were way behind. On the beach Nordie and Wren were virtually even terms. The battle continued into the river with Don Howes Nordie being equal to the occasion and winning by three seconds.

ERRIMACS LOSES ITS MAST, ONWARD WINNING

ROCKPORT, Aug. 16—In the annual "round the horn" race for Sandy Bay boats this afternoon, Merrimacs had the best of the sailing up to a hundred yards from the finish when a sharp puff blew her over. Unable to stand the gaff the mast snapped and went by the board and Onward won.

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

In the year nineteen hundred and thirty-two,

AN ORDINANCE

providing for certain ISOLATED "STOP" signs.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

SECTION 1—Every driver of a vehicle, bus or other conveyance, approaching an intersecting way at which there exists facing him, an official sign, authorized by this Municipal Council, said sign having apart from this regulation, the written approval of the Department of Public Works of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and bearing the word "STOP" shall before entering and proceeding through the intersection, bring such vehicle, bus or other conveyance to a complete STOP at such line as may be clearly marked, or, if there is no line so marked, at a place between the said sign and the line of the street intersection.

In the case of a line of two or more vehicles approaching such "STOP" sign, the drivers of the second and third vehicles in any group shall not be required to stop more than once at said designated line or place or in the immediate vicinity.

This ordinance shall not apply when the traffic is otherwise directed by a police officer or by other lawful traffic regulating signal or device.

SECTION 2—In accordance with the foregoing, the Municipal Council hereby authorize the erection and maintenance of an official "STOP" sign or "stop" signs as to face:

1—North and southbound drivers on Magnolia avenue at Western avenue.

2—Northbound drivers on Central avenue at Washington.

3—Southbound drivers on Central avenue at Western avenue.

4—Southbound drivers on Prospect street at Main street.

SECTION 3—Any persons found guilty of violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars ($20.00) for each offence.

SECTION 4—All acts or provisions of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 5—This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after the expiration of (10) days from the date of its final passage.

In Municipal Council, April 1932.

Passed first and second readings and to be enrolled.

Attention is called to the following provisions of an ordinance governing Gloucester Harbor. Sec. 44(a).

POWER BOATS — MUFFLERS

(a) Power driven boats shall not exceed a speed of ten (10) miles per hour in the inner harbor, and for the purposes of determining what is the inner harbor, same shall comprise all the waters of Gloucester harbor lying northeasterly of an imaginary line extending from the spindle standing southwesterly of the Tarr & Wenson copper paint factory directly across to the Fort Wharf, or by whatever name said wharf may be called.

(b) Boats with internal combustion engines shall be provided and equipped with a muffler or underwater exhaust of a type or types approved by and used in conformity with the rules and regulations authorized by the Commissioner of Public Safety, so that the noise of the same shall not cause unreasonable annoyance to persons in the vicinity of said boats.

LOBSTER POTS PROHIBITED

(c) Lobster or fish pots and similar contrivances attached to the surface with a rope and buoy floating on the surface, shall not be set, established, or maintained in the channel of Annisquam River, nor in the channels of the principal arms thereof, nor in the regularly used fairways in Gloucester harbor and waters adjacent thereto, nor within the courses laid out for races maintained by the Eastern Point Yacht Club and the Annisquam Yacht Club, nor anywhere else so as to unreasonably restrict the free use and navigation of said waters, unless a permit in writing is issued by the State Department of Public Works.

Any violation of this section shall be punished by a fine of Twenty Dollars ($20) for each offence.

Save the Constitution

The above spirited reproduction from an oil painting by Gilbert T. Margeson of Rockport, which hangs on the walls of Congress, is especially appropos at this time having been thrust into prominence by the proposition to remove the historic craft from her natural repository at the Charlestown navy yard to Washington and the political onslaughts on the ark of the covenant of American Liberty — the Constitution adopted by the Fathers of the Republic. It represents the historic frigate, Capt. Isaac Hull, in action with the British ship of war "Guerriere," Capt. Dacres, off the New England coast Aug. 18, 1812—one of the major sea-combats in World history coming at a time when disaster and defeat had disheartened the land forces. Purchased by Congress as the most stirring and historically correct representation of that immortal victory. Manned by New England seamen who more than held their own with the world's most gallant sea fighters.

Nor is this the first time the "Constitution" was saved by Gloucester fishermen. We quote from Pringle's History of Gloucester—pages 116-117—"Always patriotic the men of Gloucester, nearly all fishermen, enrolled in Co. G, 8th. Mass. regiment, responded to Pres. Lincoln's call for three months' volunteers (April 16, 1861) to suppress the rebellion.

"When the Eighth arrived in Philadelphia they heard news of the firing on our troops in the streets of Baltimore. Volunteers were called for—a sergeant and nineteen men, nearly two-thirds of the required number were selected. Reaching Annapolis they found the "Constitution" aground in the harbor—and they worked hours hoisting the cannon out before any other troops came on board and they did the real hard work as sailors, etc." Capt. Berry of the "Constitution" writes: "The officers commanding the gun division spoke with great praise of the willingness and efficiency of your men and I had occasion to notice them aloft in reefing, etc."

POINTS OF INTEREST

Gloucester, Cape Ann—First white man to visit its shores was Thorwald in 1004. Harbor called by Norsemen "Krossanes." Gosnold landed here in 1602 and found the place had been used as a base by Portuguese fishermen. In 1605 Champlain sailed by the Cape but did not land. The next year, September 1606, he entered the harbor which he named Le Beauport and made a map of it. Attacked by 200 Indians and sailed away the next day. In 1614 Capt. John Smith named it Cape Ann after Anne of Denmark, mother of King Charles I. First permanent settlement of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1623.

Stage Fort Park at westerly entrance of city. Site of settlement of Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1623-24. Tablet in commemoration of that fact placed on face of large boulder. Conant, Half Moon and Stone beaches.

Rafe's Chasm and Norman's Woe. Scene of "Wreck of the Hesperus." At Magnolia, Hesperus avenue. Fissure in solid rock cliff is 60 feet deep and 12 feet wide.

Mother Ann profile in Stone discovered in 1892 by Capt. William Thompson of Salem at tip end of Eastern Point. Dog Bar breakwater extends from a half mile long, completed in 1904 and extends from this point. On Eastern Point are many of the show residences of the North Shore. "The Ram-

parts" occupies site of Fort Independence.

Ten Pound Island in outer harbor; government fish hatchery thereon. Used as sheep pasture in early days. Five Pound Island in inner harbor; both so named for amounts in colonial money originally sold for.

Thompson's mountain, or Mt. Anne, West Gloucester, highest elevation on the Cape, 255 feet above sea level. Fine view ranging from Mt. Agamenticus on Maine coast to Wachusett Mountain, Bunker Hill Monument to Boston Bay. Tract given over as reservation in memory of Lawrence Minot; thickly wooded, favorite picnic resort; reached from New Way Lane. Nearby is Haskell's pond, from which city's water is secured.

Ravenswood Park, natural forest area extending from Fresh Water Cove to West Gloucester. Reached from Fresh Water Cove or the so-called Old Salem road, Western avenue. Mason Walton's cabin, "Hermit of Bond's Hill," on this road. Well worth frequenting.

Beacon or Governor's Hill, near center of city, from Washington street. Small reservation at top from which a fine view may be obtained.

Dogtown Commons, site of deserted Revolutionary settlement. Reached from Gee avenue, Riverdale. Fine example of boulder deposits of glacial period. "Whale's Jaw," best known of these boulders, at edge of common. Rocking stone, etc., now taken over by the city as a water shed.

Wharves skirting the water front, interesting as affording "close-up" of fish curing, etc.

Babson House, opposite Ellery House, erected by Col. John Low about 1745. Old slave pens in attic.

Main street, first known as Fore, afterwards as Front street. Principal business avenue. Laid out 1642. Middle street, paralleling Main, contains many old colonial houses and the Judith Sargent house, the grounds of which, originally extending to Main street have been restored.

On Middle street are the First Parish (Unitarian) Church, oldest in Gloucester; Independent Christian (Universalist) first Universalist society in America, church edifice erected 1805; St. John's Episcopal Church, Trinity Congregational Church and the First Baptist Church.

Sawyer Free Library and Reading Room, Middle street, adjoining Unitarian church. Interior fine specimen of colonial woodwork. Originally home of Thomas Sanders, merchant.

Old Town Hall Square, at junction of Middle and Washington streets. Beautiful American Legion Memorial building and monument on which was placed statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughn Hyatt.

Fort Point, at western side of inner harbor, down Commercial street from Main, fortified in 1743. Now Italian quarter and rendezvous of fishermen of that nationality.

Drives around the Cape: Up Washington street, through Riverdale, past Annisquam, Bay View, Lanesville into Pigeon Cove, Rockport and completing the circuit to Gloucester. Almost a continuous ocean view, which was completed when the Bass Rocks-Land's End stretch was completed.

Beaches: Little Good Harbor and Long Beaches, between Bass Rocks and Land's End, Rockport. Wingersheek Beach, West Gloucester, largest on Cape, two miles long, 600 feet deep at low tide; reached from Essex avenue, West Gloucester, down Concord street.

Quarries at Bay View and Pigeon Cove, among largest in country, near main highway.

Blynman canal, first cut in 1642 by Rev. Richard Blynman, at Western entrance of city.

Drives: "Little Heater," "Dark Hole" at West Gloucester.

Old Salem road, first highway from the town, blazed out in 1626, when part of the settlers went to Salem. Down Hesperus avenue (discontinued in 1892) to Salem. Name erroneously applied to Old Pest House road, leading through Ravenswood park from Western ave.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION

The pre-election voting contests conducted by the Literary Digest, the Farm Journal, the American Institute and others have proved such accurate and infallible barometers of the direction in which the popular political tide is running that even the most confirmed doubter now regards these predictions as next to infallible. To date these record about an even-Stephen decision—a very close election. All agree on this at this writing, Aug. 29, varying but 17 votes between Roosevelt and Landon—first one and then the other. But do they fail to take into consideration the great big X—although perhaps not so much an unknown quantity as it may seem—that great majority herded in the cities recipients of governmental and federal aid who expect to make this largesse a continuous performance—regarding themselves not as quasi-paupers but government employees. Here is the puzzling factor entering these prognostications heretofore absent. These will swing this election.

The New York gambling bettors are wagering 8 to 5—nearly two to one that Roosevelt will win. Usually they base their bets on as sure a thing foundation as possible. As the cards lay, who carries New York carries the day. The fact that these New York sharps are betting as they do shows to insiders that the Internationals have decided to swing the deciding vote of New York City to Roosevelt. Can the upstate vote counteract it? Landon, it has proved, is the strongest candidate—save one—the Republicans could have named. He has taken a good part of a sure, solid West from Roosevelt. The communistic California and the states within the Mormon zone remain for Roosevelt together with the great communistic cities of the North, against the great wealth-producing solvent East and northern belt of the substantial West. But one great factor, which if Roosevelt should prove to be the winner, may mitigate and materially check the presidential power. Should the results prove that the Republicans regain enough of their former strength in the House of Representatives which, may combine with the conservative Democrats from the North, the victory for Roosevelt would be materially modified. Indeed he seems to sense this according to the pronouncement that there will be no more taxation imposed than at present. The where is the money coming from to liquidate what debt already incurred? Watch the Literary Digest poll to be made somewhere about the middle of September. The Shore's opinion is that Borah, if nominated, would have sweated the country, except of course, the solid South

THE FARNUM CASE

THE summer resident realty and other interests annually pays into the city treasury in taxation one-third of the funds required to run the city. For that they receive at the most an average of perhaps twelve or fifteen weeks residence in return. In addition they pay full years water rates for the supply of that necessity. In addition through the medium of various pan-handling schemes, now become a fixed racket, they are held up for substantial sums annually, for white elephant propositions enthusiasts have saddled on the city and which, unless outside support is received must go to the wall or be materially curtailed.

An exceptional situation for an exceptional community. Nothing so similarly favored like it on the New England coast with the exception of Newport. If there was no summer interest the taxation scale of Gloucester would amount to $60 on the thousand—taking into account the bonded indebtedness. Therefore as the bulk of this is saddled on real estate, both summer and permanent, the summer resident interest is deeply interested.

The bursting of America's biggest financial bubble, that of '29, fell heavily upon the wealthy and well-to-do. The greater part were gambling up to their ears in short-necked margins and many were wiped out overnight. This left them high and dry, some hardly with their shirts, to use the vernacular. Many had imposing estates on which were paid taxes to a considerable degree. They were hard put to pay this assessment.

Henry W. Farnum of New York and Chicago came to Magnolia some years ago, bought extensively, employed labor lavishly right up to the time of the Big Bust. He was in every way progressive, an employer of local labor and a valuable adjunct to that community.

It appears that he got into a position in 1929 from which he could not pay taxes on an estate valued at $150,000. To help him out that valuation was at first scaled forty percent and then gradually each year to $62,000, more than half the original. Still he found difficulty in paying the taxes and at length after a series of years of default he was forced to turn the title to all this property over to the city in lieu of payment of $18,000 taxes.

That was certainly a tough break. He sought later, as others in position would have done, to extricate himself and save the property.

Overtures were made to the city to convey the property to some representative—the Chase National Bank of New York taking the initiative. Now the City authorities did what "The Shore" considers the proper and humane thing under the circumstances. While it held the title in fee simple and—"The Shore" speaks by the card here it had an offer of $20,000 for the property—some $4000 more than for what it was turned in—it refused to consider the offer but held out the lifeline to Mr. Farnum. To its credit it must be said the city had no disposition to play the Shylock.

So far so good. But at this juncture lawyers began to come into the case—and they made trouble. Presumably these lawyers were not working for charity—they must eat—and they do like other people.

It appeared that all the cash money that could be raised was $12,000—whether the lawyers got a cut or not of that does not appear—so a suggestion was made to the Municipal council that it take that sum and call it square. The argument was made

THE PROBLEM OF THE CITIES

THE answer—good government. It is undeniable that with the changing character of population and the gradual submergence of the original Yankee stock and its supplanting by those of a different racial strain whose viewpoint is diametrically opposite that a change greatly for the worse has come in municipal administration.

The dominant characteristics of the Yankee was thrift and economy. Not to say that there were not examples to the contrary but, on the whole, the cities and towns big and small of New England were governed wisely, largely actuated by the pay-as-you-go principle. Accordingly large municipal surpluses were piled up.

What is called the Jeffersonian concept of Democracy was really a Puritan outgrowth, in practical operation more than a hundred years before the birth of Jefferson, who probably gave his idea of municipal and national economics from New England—certainly not from Virginia. Its essence was Democracy but he held that Democracy to be successful should be based and predicated upon educated and disciplined peoples as was the British and Germanic stock which settled and developed the thirteen original colonies. Not a government by mobocracy.

The early Puritans, descendants of the Cromwellians who founded the Commonwealth of England and later of Massachusetts—note that word—were careful to graft the principle of free schools and education on the system of government, hence we find the establishment of Harvard, the Boston Latin School and the common school system.

In recent years people of alien racial

THE REVEL

By Bartholomew Dowling

We meet 'neath the sounding rafter,
And the walls around are bare;
As they shout back our peals of laughter
It seems as the dead are there.
Then stand to your glasses!—
steady!
We drink in our comrades' eyes;
One cup to the dead already;
Hurrah for the next that dies!

Not here are the goblets glowing,
Not here is the vintage sweet;
'Tis cold as our hearts are growing,
And dark as the doom we meet.
But stand to your glasses!—steady!
And soon shall our pulses rise;
One cup to the dead already;
Hurrah for the next that dies!

There's many a hand that's shaking,
And many a cheek that's sunk;
But soon, though our hearts are breaking,
They'll burn with the wine we've drunk.

Then stand to your glasses!—
steady!
'Tis here the revival lies;
Quaff a cup to the dead already;
Hurrah for the next that dies!

Time was when we laughed at others,
We thought we were wiser then;
Ha! ha! let them think of their mothers,
Who hope to see them again.
No! stand to your glasses!—steady!
The thoughtless is here the wise;
One Cup for the dead already;
Hurrah for the next that dies!

Not a sigh for the lot that darkles.
Not a fear for the friends that sink;
We'll fall 'mid the wine cup's sparkles,
As mute as the wine we drink.
Come, stand to your glasses!—
steady!
'Tis this that the respite buys;
One Cup for the dead already;
Hurrah for the next that dies!

Who dreads to the dust returning?
Who shrinks from the sable shore,
Where the high and haughty yearning
Of the soul can sting no more?
No! stand to your glasses!—steady!
This world is a world of lies!
One Cup to the dead already;
Hurrah for the next that dies!

Cut off from the land that bore us,
Betrayed by the land we find,
When the brightest are gone before us,
And the dullest are most behind—Stand! stand to your glasses!—
steady!
'Tis all we have left to prize!
One Cup to the dead already;
Hurrah for the next that dies!

THE ROCKPORT ARTISTS' BALL

High-powered publicity was exemplified at the Rockport Artists' Ball, a throng that packed Town all being rounded up by the pronouncement that its "Beyond the Stratosphere ball with the sky the limit" was the keynote, attracting the morbidly curious who, in the language of the vaudeville posters of yesteryear longed for the "rich, rare and racy" in an exhibit of female pulchritude—a la the type of art brought into existence years ago by that exemplar of what was "highest" in art, The Police Gazette, whose models were the beefy British Blondes and the Rentz Bentley troupe the idols of the front-seated cognoscenti.

But Puritan Rockport, shocked to its very center—and first to crash the gate for a front seat—turned thumbs down on any more of the high jinks which has before characterized these affairs serving notice that any daring offenders would be escorted to the hoosegow for a night's lodging. It may be that the "ceiling" of the sky on that particular rainy night was uncommonly low and the "limit" so limited as to slow down the tempo of the would-be daring. Nothing more striking than some pictures of beach-clad feminines—of the pornographic photographers art—which appear regularly in the papers were to be seen and little of that. Few there were attired like "Thebaws Queen" whose picturesque raiment is so vividly portrayed in "Mandalay." And were the unco' guid who came and paid good money to see a high speed show disappointed; It is rumored that some even wanted their money back. However, the vigilant watchmen of public morality were on guard and saw nothing to warrant their interference. Neither did the general public. It was just a good old-fashioned costume party and as usual a good time was had by all. Incidentally the treasury benefitted.

Costumes were unique and picturesque. Other balls in the past have been both rich and exotic in their costumes, but this one was unusually so with sky, stars and planets and background and accessories, lending curious cosmic effects produced by lights.

The artists took a tip from aeronautics and called their ball, "Beyond the Stratosphere." The setting gave many novel ideas to the artists. At times the ball looked like an exaggerated version of "Mid-Summer Night's Dream."

High up in the center of the hall ceiling was a large globe, its face a myriad of reflecting facets, on which spotlights played in a variety of colors. The colors were reflected on the floor and changed constantly.

A mammoth spotlight high up in the gallery furnished clouds, strange birds, beautiful butterflies in constant motion. The varicolored lights flashed on the dancers as they moved about. On the floor were a number of visitors from Mars, Venus, Mercury and other planets.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hershey were dressed as a man and woman from Mars. Walter Kilham, the Boston architect, was robed as the High Priest of Mars.

Miss Erma Arthur of White Plains, N. Y., was dressed as a stratosphere ballet girl. Mrs. Clyde Jathurst was as an asteroid dancing with a comet. And there were Mr. and Mrs. Proviance Miller of Northampton dressed as stratosphere explorers, and Mrs. George Le Boutelier as the milky way.

In addition to these Martian characters there were the usual costume ball artists in earthly costumes, dressed as Arab sheiks, as Dutch and Ethiopians, as Spanish gypsies and bull fighters, as Russian cossacks, Hindus, Senegambians and clowns.

The grand march did not get under way until about 11 o'clock and from then on through the night there was something doing every minute of the time.

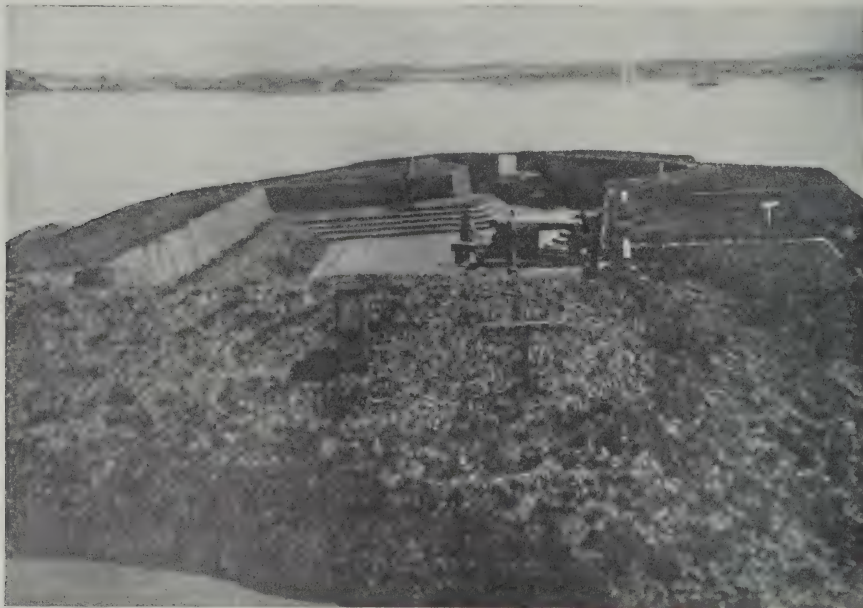

The ball committee consisted of Maurice Contris and Samuel Hershey. The judges were Dr. E. E. Cleaves, Mrs. Mary J. Bray and Joseph Cratchett.

ONE of the outstanding historical places in New England is Stage Fort park taken over some forty years ago as a memorial of the foundation in 1623 of the Massachusetts Bay colony for the use of the citizens of Gloucester, given over in these degenerate days to carnivals and the like, including a licensed beer place. O tempora, O mores.

It was originally called Fisherman's Field, but that name was superseded soon after by that of Stage Fort from the fact that the pioneer fishermen settlers built their stages or wharves and drying stands—called stages—thereon, the "Fort" coming from the fact of one of the most spectacular incidents in early New England history occurring here, the clash between the military company of Miles Standish and that of Capt. John Hewes, at the head of a company of fishermen adventurers from the west of England.

According to charters granted several parties laid claim to the ownership of Cape Ann, that of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, that of the Lord Sheffield, and others.

The Pilgrims came over to Plymouth in 1620 and the Dorchester Company of Puritans in 1623 to Cape Ann. Now it must be distinctly borne in mind that the Pilgrims of Plymouth and the Puritans of Cape Ann were two separate organizations. The Pilgrims originally intended to settle in Virginia but Capt. Kit Jones of the "Mayflower" — an old slaver — double crossed and landed them almost in the dead of winter "on a stern and rock-bound coast"—mostly sand.

The Dorchester Company which founded the Massachusetts Bay colony in Gloucester harbor in 1623 were the first and original Puritans to come to this country. They were assembled and financed by a corporation sponsored by the Rev. John White of the "Puritan" or Low church of St. Peter's of Dorchester, England, and the first religious services held here were by Rev. John Lyford, regularly ordained by the Church of England. A fact to be remembered by the well informed historian.

However, the Plymouth Pilgrims

made no attempt to dispossess the Gloucester Puritans of their rights. Stage fort, or rather Fisherman's field, but they did object to the presence of Capt. John Hewes, who also had pre-empted a part of the field as a base for his company. So claiming the Cape as theirs they sent over Capt. Miles Standish, that redoubtable military leader—so valiant in war but laggard in love—see the poetry—to dispossess Hewes.

Mustering up his followers with arquebuses and an old field piece— from their fort on Plymouth hill—Standish sailed across the bay and landed on Half Moon beach. Coming ashore he consulted with Gov. Roger Conant of the Dorchester colony with whom he had no quarrel. He got the lay of the land and resolved to immediately proceed to oust Hewes who had taken up a strong position at what is now the fort. In the meantime the sailors of the Hewes outfit scouting around among the Plymouth company became cognizant of their errand. Hewes thereupon hastily sui-

One of the strong episodes of the Pageant—all were outstanding—was the “Departure From Dorchester” when 2000 participants enacted the sailing, gathering on the village green to bid God Speed to the villagers, a scene that will always live in memory of those who witnessed it.

NOTE: Pageant book "Gloucester Tercentenary" may be obtained at Blanchard's, Main Street.

Addenda: In 1630 the Pilgrims sent over a colony from Plymouth under command of John Robinson said to be a son of Rev. John of Pilgrim fame, who settled in Annisquam, then named Planters' Neck.

A tablet placed in one of the ledges at the entrance of the fort gives an outline of its history all authenticated by record. It reads:

that it was impossible to raise the additional $6000. The writer, in another vehicle, pointed out that this could be bridged by a plan by which this added $6000—which would square the bill—might be financed over a long period of years. The Co-operative Bank would have so financed the amount. A well grounded lawyer from the writer has consulted on the matter and says this $6000 could have been cared for all right and the property be turned over to the Farnams. But a lawyer's pleading—talking for themselves as much as the clients—prevailed. The Municipal council after bitter debate, three to two, passed an order turning the bill over to the Farnam representatives for the $12,000.

Immediately the fat was in the fire. It was not so much that the $6000 had been lost, but for the fact that a dangerous precedent had been established. At once on all sides came demands from others, hotel proprietors who had been up against it, so to speak, for similar consideration and the end is not yet. It is claimed that the whole matter was illegally done and in part against an opinion of the City solicitor.

After riding for a few hours, we became exceedingly hungry. We thought it would be great sport to race over to Stage Coach Inn, so Charles took one road and I took another. The way I went was by far the shortest, before Charles did. We could not go beyond a trot because both roads were concrete. Even though the road I took was the shorter and I should have reached the Inn first, Charles praised me on my swift riding (just to be

Last night, we paid our farewell visit to the Rendez-Vous for this season. We danced together all evening, not being aware that anyone else was around. On the way home we stopped for a soda. We sat in a booth, for a long time, talking very seriously. Charles told me to close my eyes and not to look until I was told. He simply reached for my hand and slipped on my finger a beautiful, sparkling diamond ring. I was so confused when he opened my eyes, I hardly knew what to say, but all Charles wanted me to say was, "Yes."

MILADY GOES SHOPPING

Gloucester, Mass.

Dear Eloise,

I am writing this in great haste amid the hustle and bustle of packing. We are planning to leave for home soon. However, Joan and Chris are going to remain in Gloucester for short time.

We went over town for the last time yesterday. Tim drove over with us to select some equipment for the garden at the New York home. Of course, he went into L. E. Andrews to secure these things. We should have brought a truck to convey everything he bought—a hose, rake, shovels, spades, a lawn-sprinkler, flower seeds, grass seeds, and goodness knows what else. Mrs. Marsh purchased a set of dishes, glassware, and a unique brass door-knocker in a figurehead representing Comedy.

Mr. Marsh went to the Co-operative Bank to settle the matter of his loan, and thanked them for their kindness and co-operation. While he was there I made my final trip to the Gloucester National Bank to make arrangements to have my account transferred to the New York bank.

Mr. Marsh and Tim had amply taken care of their business in town so they went back to the house. So Mrs. Marsh, Maybelle, and I cruised around on our farewell visit to the Gloucester stores.

Maybelle had consented to attend to the purchasing of some provisions for Joan. We thought we would cross this off our list first, and went to the First National Store. Joan, knowing how busy we were, thought it would be a good idea if we all came to her house for dinner. Cooking for so many people would be a new stunt for the new housewife, so we planned on something easy to prepare. Joan had told me about a recipe she found in a magazine—a new way of baking lamb chops that really sounded delicious. After scanning her shopping list, Maybelle selected the lamb chops, peppers, onions, and many other delicacies for the repast. Of her own accord, to save Joan any extra cooking, Maybelle got a chocolate cake which looked exceedingly tempting. While here, Mrs. Marsh happened to spy some of Gorton's products. She, for once had a grand idea—she bought a variety of things to take back to New York—codfish cakes, flaked fish, deep sea roe, and clam chowder. She knows this is going to make a big hit with her friends back home.

The next thing to be considered was clothes. We thought we would purchase a few fall dresses before we went back to New York. Mimi's was showing quite a complete line of light wools, and heavy silks. It is amazing how Mimi can sell dresses that are so chic and stylish at such reasonable prices. Mrs. Marsh bought a real smart black and white tunic dress that was very becoming to her. After she was all set, I proceeded to outfit myself. The dress I selected is a snappy, light blue tunic affair. It has a milhtary shoulder effect, a double set of bright red buttons the shape of foot-balls, and a most novel idea—the tunic has two small slits in the back to disclose a red plaid lining. You mentioned in your last letter that if I saw a dress I thought you might like, I was to buy it for you, and you would settle the financial end of it when I got home. I am bringing you a gray and red plaid tailored wool that I am sure is just your type.

Having said our goodbyes to Mr. and Mrs. Wells, we proceeded to buy some electrical equipment at the Gloucester Gas and Electric Company. Mrs. Marsh wanted one of those Automatic Roasters like the one we had bought for Joan. While we were there, we arranged to have the service man disconnect the gas and electricity in the house, and settled up our last bill.

After all this rushing around, I was completely exhausted and suggested

SEVENTY-FIVE

Seventy-five years old to-day! Old? Just old, did some one say? Should the word "old" ever be said? Why not say "years young" instead? Some say one is never old; Each day brings new life untold; Each day brings so many things, Free from strife and free from stings, Say, why ever call things old?

Let's just smile and call things young. Discard gloom and look for fun. Take things as they come and say, "Life is just another day," So, while I am seventy-five, And, if I must be so bold, In the discard goes old "old," There to stay just where its hung. Meanwhile I'm not old but young.

Marching up to the redoubt plan was adopted, namely that Hewes should remain and finish out his fishing season and depart next year for his station on Monhegan island off the Maine coast. And so it was agreed. Standish and his men re-embarked $3000 and had the fort restored to its original plan. After a search of twenty-five years a photo of the fort

WATER BOY, ONWARD SPLIT AT SANDY BAY

ROCKPORT, Aug. 23—Morning and afternoon races were sailed today at Sandy Bay, the morning session being the sailoff of yesterday's postponement. The early races sailed over a triangle in a light southwest breeze, were featured by the victory of Alex Chisholm's Water Boy over Laura Cooney's Onward.

However, Onward turned the tables in the afternoon race over the twice-around course from Straitsmouth to Andrews Point and a beat to the finish.

The closest racing was in the Sandy Bay class in which Bobeno won both in the morning and again in the afternoon. In the later engagement she was the pursuing craft until the second time around on the windward work, coming up from behind to tally. The sum-

NORTH SHORE KENNEL CLUB SHOW ON AUG. 29

Several Judges Coming from New York—Proceeds Will Aid Beverly Hospital

Recognized now as one of the outstanding out-door dog shows of New England, though it has been held for only two previous years, plans for the North Shore Kennel Club's show, which this year will be held on Saturday, Aug. 29, at the Myopia schooling field in Hamilton, are going on apace. Proceeds from the affair will go for the benefit of the Beverly Hospital.

As there are so many good and well known judges of dogs in and about Boston, very few are being asked from other locales to pass judgment on the different breeds, so there will not, in all probability, be as much entertaining in connection with the show as might have been if the judges had come from afar.

Oliver C. Harriman of Park avenue, New York and Long Island is coming on to review the classes of Dachshunds and fox terriers, and will stay, over that week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer, at their Hamilton house, "Juniper Ridge."

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert L. Steward will have as their house guests at "Windriver," in Topsfield, during the show, Robert Sedgwick, also of New York, and T. Dickson Smith of Boston, the former of whom will judge Airedales, Scotch terriers and Sealyhams, and the latter, an authority, and so well qualified to judge them, on Great Danes, Great Pyrenees and Newfoundlands. Mr. Harriman will have the difficult job, after the tumult and the shouting of each class has died down, of selecting the best of the best—or, more technically, the best in show.

Mrs. Wheeler H. Page of Millbrook, N. Y., will be here to officiate in one of the most interesting classes of the whole show — tests in obedience. There are probably many dog owners who have taken the time to do thoroughly that painstaking task of training a dog to obey, not on the second or third command, but at once, the different motions they desire him to go through, whether be simply lying down or coming immediately his name is called, more complicated duties, such as fetching and carrying, tricks of various kinds or actual work. There have been classes organized to teach the owner how to teach the dog, both at Cambridge last winter, and on North Shore this past spring and summer, and the trials and the results will be interesting to spectators, as to whether the trained dog and owners do better than those who have worked it out themselves.

Mrs. Page will spend the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Justin W. Grier at their Hamilton house on Farrington road. There will be several luncheons and dinners on both Saturday and Sunday, and probably a dance, one of the last of the season, at the Essex County Club.

Clarence Grey of Marblehead will judge the several children's classes in which points are to be awarded only on handling, except where the dog's performance reflects on the child's.

BUNNAG AND SARIYONG WIN (Continued from last week)

MAGNOLIA, Aug. 17—The final match in the Beach Club's tennis tournament was played shortly before the thunderstorm today. Tula Bunnag and Dim Suriyong defeated Wicks Jones and Charles Wadsworth, 6-3 and 6-4, for doubles honors.

VOORHIS WINS AT ROCKAWAY

Bob Voorhis won the men's singles for the second year in the Rockaway tennis tourney by beating William S. Packer Jr., 6-4; 6-3; 6-8; 6-3.

Voorhis had the match pretty well his own way until the middle of the third set when Packer staged a fine rally to pull out the set. The climax in this set came when Packer after trailing, 4-5 and love-forty broke Voorhis' service and went on to win the set, 8-6.

Peggy Baker won the women's finals in straight sets by beating Pauline Raymond, 6-3; 6-0.

Men's doubles and mixed doubles remain to be played. Finalists are Kenneth Cooper and Bill Packer and Bob Tarr and Bill Clark. Mixed doubles finalists are Mrs. Segar and Packer and Louise Wallace and Bill Harmar. The summary:

MEN'S SINGLES, THIRD ROUND
 Tom Phelps defeated T. Devaskul, 6—3, 7—5.

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

Attention is called to the following provisions of an ordinance governing Gloucester Harbor. Sec. 44(a).

POWER BOATS — MUFLERS

(a) Power driven boats shall not exceed a speed of ten (10) miles per hour in the inner harbor, and for the purposes of determining what is the inner harbor, same shall comprise all the waters of Gloucester harbor lying northeasterly of an imaginary line extending from the spindle standing southwesterly of the Tarr & Wons copper paint factory directly across to the Fort Wharf, or by whatever name said wharf may be called.

(b) Boats with internal combustion engines shall be provided and equipped with a muffler or underwater exhaust of a type or types approved by and used in conformity with the rules and regulations authorized by the Commissioner of Public Safety, so that the noise of the same shall not cause unreasonable annoyance to persons in the vicinity of said boats.

LOBSTER POTS PROHIBITED

(c) Lobster or fish pots and similar contrivances attached to the surface with a rope and buoy floating on the surface, shall not be set, established, or maintained in the channel of Annisquam River, nor in the channels of the principal arms thereof, nor in the regularly used fairways in Gloucester harbor and waters adjacent thereto, nor within the courses laid out for races maintained by the Eastern Point Yacht Club and the Annisquam Yacht Club, nor anywhere else so as to unreasonably restrict the free use and navigation of said waters, unless a permit in writing is issued by the State Department of Public Works.

Any violation of this section shall be punished by a fine of Twenty Dollars ($20) for each offence.

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

In the year nineteen hundred and thirty-two,

AN ORDINANCE

providing for certain ISOLATED "STOP" signs.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL

SECTION 1—Every driver of a vehicle, bus or other conveyance, approaching an intersecting way at which there exists facing him, an official sign, authorized by this Municipal Council, said sign having apart from this regulation, the written approval of the Department of Public Works of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and bearing the word "STOP" shall before entering and proceeding through the intersection, bring such vehicle, bus or other conveyance to a complete STOP at such line as may be clearly marked, or, if there is no line so marked, at a place between the said sign and the line of the street intersection.

In the case of a line of two or more vehicles approaching such "STOP" sign, the drivers of the second and third vehicles in any group shall not be required to stop more than once at said designated line or place or in the immediate vicinity.

This ordinance shall not apply when the traffic is otherwise directed by a police officer or by a other lawful traffic regulating signal or device.

SECTION 2—In accordance with the foregoing, the Municipal Council hereby authorize the erection and maintenance of an official "STOP" sign or "stop" signs, as to face:

- 1—North and southbound drivers on Magnolia avenue at Western avenue.
- 2—Northbound drivers on Commercial avenue at Washington.
- 3—Southbound drivers on Commercial avenue at Western avenue.
- 4—Southbound drivers on Prospect street at Main street.

SECTION 3—Any persons found guilty of violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be guilty of misdemeanor and may be punished by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars ($20.00) for each offence.

SECTION 4—All acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECTION 5 — This ordinance shall take effect and be in force on and after the expiration of (10) days from the date of final passage.

In Municipal Council, April 1932.

Passed first and second readings and to be enrolled.

ALLEN F. GRANT, City Clerk

In Municipal Council, April 1932, Passed to be ordained.

ALLEN F. GRANT, City Clerk

CITY OF GLOUCESTER

NOTICE

No person shall set, maintain or increase a fire in the open air between March 1st and December except by written permission of the Chief of the Fire Department or the Fire Warden.

Persons wishing to burn rubbish, brush, grass, etc., in the business or residential sections of the city, within the limits established by the Eastern avenue School on Eastern avenue and the cut bridge on Western avenue and the Green Washington street, should apply to the Chief of the Fire Department. Those wishing to burn rubbish, brush, grass, etc., in the outlying portions of the city, that is outside of the limits as here set forth, whose fire would be on or near any wood, brush or grassland, should apply to the Fire Warden.

Readers of this notice are cautioned to be extremely careful of matches, cigars and cigarette while in or near any wood brushland to prevent forest fire.

One of the steps in the preparation of codfish for the market. Drying and curing whole codfish at the Gorton-Pew Fisheries.

You Are Cordially Invited—

OUR door is always open. And we are always glad to show visitors the fascinating processes employed in our plant. See how we take fish fresh from the ocean and prepare them for the tables of America's discriminating housewives. There is no more interesting sight in all of quaint old Gloucester.

If it were only possible to transport some of the charm of Gloucester back home—its romantic harbor, its curious old streets and homes, its atmosphere of the sea. Although this is impossible you may have a reminder of pleasant Gloucester days in sending to your home some of our delicious fish products. For this purpose

Emerson's Tribute to the Cape Ann Shore

(NOTE:—In the 50's a group of "Intellectuals" from the Brook Farm colony came down to Pigeon Cove for the summer. Among them were Ralph Waldo Emerson, Longfellow, Alcott, Thoreau, Margaret Fuller and others. Returning from one of these visits Emerson wrote the following apostrophe to the sea. Summer residents of Pigeon Cove had it inscribed on a tablet and placed for some years in a conspicuous position. This tablet is now in possession of the Pigeon Cove Historical Society.)

"RETURNED from Pigeon Cove where we have made acquaintance with the sea seven days. 'Tis a noble, friendly power and seemed to say to me 'Why so late and slow to come to me? Am I not always thy proper summer home? Is not my voice needful music; my breath thy healthful climate in the heat—my touch thy cure? Was ever couch so magnificent as mine? Lie down on my warm ledges and learn that a very little is all you need. I have made this architecture superfluous and it is paltry beside mine.' Here are twenty Romes and Ninevehs and Karnaks in ruins together. Here they all are, prostrate or half piled. And behold the sea, the opaline, the beautiful, strong yet beautiful as the rose or the rainbow, full of food, nourishers of men, purgers of the world, creating a sweet climate and in its unchangeable ebb and flow and, in its beauty at a few furlongs, giving a hint of that which changes and is not perfect."
